M'Nutt Drafts New Order To Thaw Out Job Freeze

USES Authorized To Grant Releases If Workers' Shift Will Aid War Effort

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt yesterday revealed plans to thaw out his drastic weekend "wage job" freeze to the extent necessary to permit workers in essential activities to transfer to higher-paying jobs in the interest of the war effort.

War Manpower Commission officials have already prepared a draft of an amendment to the regulations issued Saturday to authorize offices of the United States Employment Service to grant releases to higher-paying jobs in all cases where proposed shifts are found "to aid in the effective prosecution of the war," it was learned.

Saturday's order authorized WMC local offices to grant "certificates of availability" permitting essential workers to transfer to higher-paying jobs only in the 60-odd areas subject to WMC job-stabilization plans. In all other areas, essential workers were denied the right to move to higher-paying jobs, with workers in nonessential activities the only ones privileged to move at will. No barrier was placed on movement at the same or lower pay, however.

Privilege Extended

The amendment, which is expected to be announced in two or three days along with detailed instructions to all field offices, will have the effect of extending to the whole country the job-changing privileges accorded workers employed in the 60 controlled areas. In such areas, rules are made permitting shifts from job to job to promote full utilization of all available manpower in the interest of the war effort.

Most typical movement authorized in a controlled area is a transfer from one job to another to permit fuller use of a worker's skill.

Movement to jobs at higher pay not believed in the interest of the war effort will remain under the ban, McNutt said.

McNutt described the new arrangement as an "interim" procedure which will remain in effect while WMC officials are rushing ahead with plans to institute job stabilization plans in most of the country.

Working on D. C. Plan

Some of these plans will be put into effect regionally—others on a local basis, he said.

WMC officials responsible for the Washington metropolitan area were believed speeding to completion a controlled hiring plan for the District of Columbia which would be integrated with the restrictions on moving to jobs providing higher pay. There were also reports that WMC was embarking on what may be one of its most difficult jobs—stabilization of pay in New York City.

Labor reaction to the WMC order was slow in appearing, but

25,000 Expected As Nats and A's Open Ball Season

Connie Mack, 80-year-old manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, and Ossie Bluege, rookie pilot of the Washington Nationals, will send their respective knuckle ball aces, Luman Harris and Dutch Leonard, against each other in the opening of the major league baseball season here today.

Manpower Chief Paul McNutt, who once pitched for Indiana University, will sub for his boss, President Roosevelt, in the traditional opening pitch at 3 p. m. and the war-riddled Nats and A's will take the field a minute later. Upwards of 25,000 are expected at Griffith Stadium.

District Land and Air Heroes Honored for Pacific Exploits

Lieut. Knode, Among Those Decorated, to See New Baby Soon

A group of District of Columbia fighting men—men fighting on the ground and in the air—has been honored for its exploits in the vast Southwest Pacific area which Gen. Douglas MacArthur commands, according to reports received yesterday from Australia.

They are:

Lieut. Thomas Knode of 2216 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest; Maj. Henry G. Thorne, Army pilot of 1914 Connecticut Avenue Northwest; Lieut. Col. Felix M. Hardison of 1624 Forty-fourth Street Northwest; Sergt. Quintin W. Blakely, radioman-gunner on a Flying Fortress, of 1205 Clifton Street Northwest; Pvt. First Class G. A. Wangler of 705 Eighteenth Street Northwest; Sergt. Edward D. Connor, jr., whose father is with the Navy Department; Col. John W. Mott of 2153 California Street Northwest; Lieut. Daniel S. Baughman, jr., of the Navy; Lieut. Jack C. McIntyre of 3538 A Street Southeast; Capt. Bruce H. Bennett of 2007 Klingle Road Northwest; Lieut. Eugene E. Greeson of 3228 Hiatt Place Northwest and Lieut. Gerald T. Rogers of 1439 Spring Road Northwest.

Lieutenant Knode is a former news director of the National Broadcasting Co.

Rifle in hand, the 27-year-old lieutenant led his platoon through the New Guinea jungle toward Japanese positions near Buna. A Jap rifle cracked. Knode was hit in the leg. He hesitated only for a moment, then hobbled on. Minutes later he was hit again, this time in the foot.

Knode could go no further, but before he would consent to be evacuated, he called for his sergeant, and issued final instructions on the action his men were to execute.

This was last December 5, in the midst of the bitterly fought but victorious Papuan campaign. And for his display of "extraordinary heroism in action," Lieutenant Knode was decorated with the Distinguished Service Cross, highest

Investigation Of OWI Voted

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday approved a resolution for an investigation of the Office of War Information and called on Elmer Davis to conduct a press conference in the presence of Senators.

President Roosevelt, at the same time, sent to Congress a request for $47,343,000 to run OWI for the next fiscal year.

Restoration Hopes of FSA Rest in Senate

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday eliminated from the Department of Agriculture's 1944 supply bill the Farm Security Administration and "all its functions," leaving final fate of the agency in hands of the Senate.

Provisions transferring FSA work to the Farm Credit Administration, as proposed by the House Appropriations Committee, were struck from the measure on points of order.

Efforts to restore rehabilitation and farm tenant loan duties of the controversial agency proved fruitless, the $707,099,622 bill as tentatively approved containing only $500,000 for administrative expenses "connected with protecting the Government's stake in 195-million-dollar farm tenancy loans now outstanding."

Restoration Expected

The Senate is expected to restore the FSA, but to limit its program considerably. The agency is now being investigated by a House committee for its "socialistic behavior" and for its refusal to liquidate the rural resettlement projects with the speed demanded by Congress."

Representative Tarver (Democrat) of Georgia, who fought to salvage $421,039 for resettlement's liquidation, declared yesterday that FSA had completely ignored the wishes of Congress in regard to

To Try Again Today

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

For the second time, Speaker Rayburn sought yesterday to bring uncompromising House tax leaders together on a pay-as-you-earn bill, but won from them only an agreement that the search for a compromise will continue.

Working under continued threat that a House majority will take control forcibly of the tax bill if peaceful negotiation collapse, Chairman Doughton and five ranking Ways and Means Committee members prepared to confer at 1 p. m. today in their sixth "emergency" bipartisan tax parley since Friday morning.

If they reach an agreement before the House adjourns this afternoon, they will carry the news formally to Speaker Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas, and the two party floor leaders, Representatives McCormack (Democrat) and Martin (Republican) both of Massachusetts, all of whom sat in on yesterday's meeting.

Will Try Tonight

If they fail to agree this afternoon they will keep on trying tonight, and tomorrow. By Thursday a discharge petition to force a bill to the House floor can be started if Republican leaders and restless Democrats carry out their threat to use this maneuver to obtain another vote on pay-as-you-go plans.

As the House leaders sought tax action, Senate Floor Leaders Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky and McNary (Republican) of Oregon served notice that their colleagues "might" be called to vote on a tax bill next week.

Delaying tax compromise in the House was this double issue:

1. What part of a tax year will be forgiven or abated in starting pay-as-you-go collections and how the abatement will be distributed among the tax-paying citizens.

2. How to bring the issue before the House—by finding beforehand a compromise on which the House can be expected to agree and letting it say "yes" or "no," or by guaranteeing a vote for all the leading plans.

Chairman Doughton told newsmen that the group had had a "friendly discussion," but that the question was so controversial that no vote was tried, and "we haven't reached a decision." On continuing the negotiations, Doughton said he was not overoptimistic "but I'm always hopeful."

Representative Knutson (Republican) of Minnesota said that "by and large we're getting together. I don't know whether we're just wearing each other down, but we are getting together. We're clearer today than we were yesterday, and I'm confident that in another day

Heavy Raids Made On Enemy Airfields In Aleutians and Northern Solomons

By H. K. Reynolds
International News Service Staff Writer

The Navy Department announced yesterday that United States bombers have blasted three Japanese cargo ships in the northern Solomons while carrying out a new series of destructive raids on Japanese airfields in both the Solomons and Aleutians.

Navy torpedo bombers apparently sank one 10,000-ton Japanese ship in the Shortland Island area, scored two hits on another, and dropped bombs near enough to a third vessel to cause some damage.

Ten additional attacks were made last Saturday by United States Army bombers against Japanese bases in the western Aleutians, and fires visible for 30 miles were started at Japan's Kahili airfield in the northern Solomons.

The Aleutian air operations included nine more raids on Kiska and one attack on Attu.

One of the Japanese buildings at Kiska was entirely destroyed in Saturday's raid, antiaircraft positions were silenced, and three beached planes were damaged by machinegun fire. Bomb hits also were scored in the camp and airplane hangar area.

Developments in the North and South Pacific aerial offensives were reported in Navy communique No. 349 as follows:

"South Pacific: (All dates are East longitude.)

"1. On April 17:

"(A) In the afternoon, Dauntless (Douglas) light bombers and Wildcat (Grumman F4F) fighters bombed the Japanese dispersal and runway areas at Munda, in the central Solomons.

"(B) During the night, Avenger (Grumman TBF) torpedo bombers attacked two Japanese cargo vessels in the Shortland Island area. Five hits were scored on a large ship of about 10,000 tons which was later seen in a sinking condition. Two other vessels were encountered by Avengers and two hits were scored on one ship and a number of near hits on the other vessel.

"(c) The same night, formations of Liberator (Consolidated B-24) and Flying Fortress (Boeing B-17) heavy bombers and Avengers attacked Kahili, in the Shortland Island area. Hits were scored on the runway and dispersal areas, resulting in fires visible for 30 miles.

Press May Be Allowed Access To Participants at Food Parley

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Assistant Secreary of State Dean Acheson yesterday was reported by congressional sources to be prepared to recommend relaxation of President Roosevelt's decision to bar newspaper reporters from sessions of the international food conference at Hot Springs, Va., May 18.

It was Acheson's reported intention, when he left an extraordinary conference with members of the Senate Foreign Relations and Agriculture Committees to urge Secretary of State Cordell Hull to propose to Mr. Roosevelt that reporters be allowed to have daily contact with chairmen of conference subcommittees.

Acheson conferred with the two committees, whose memberships include both Republican and Democratic leaders, following an outburst of criticism in House and Senate over the Adminstration's decision to bar newspapers from direct contact with conference delegates and from attendance at all but the opening and closing sessions of the gathering.

The Assistant Secretary was to confer with members of the House Foreing Affairs and Agriculture Committees at a joint meeting today.

Forty-three nations have been invited to attend the conference, which will consider from 10 to 12 subjects relating to international problems of food production, distribution and requirements. Subcommittees will be assigned to investigate each subject and chairmen of these groups, as it is now

Poultry Trade Here Refuses To Top Ceiling

Wholesalers Vote Not to Exceed Price For Birds on Farms

Ninety per cent of the wholesale poultry dealers in Washington—15 members of the Poultry Section of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association—voted yesterday to "strike" against paying above-ceiling prices for live birds on the farm with the result they said they expected to close their doors.

Joseph B. Danzansky, attorney for the poultrymen, said the farmers from whom local chickens are bought are now asking prices from 3 to 10 cents a pound higher than the selling price allowed to wholesalers under OPA ceilings.

In the meantime, Thomas J. Emerson and Harry W. Jones, who are enforcement officials with the OPA, announced the agency had been conducting an extensive investigation of black market conditions in Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

Grand Jury to Hear Case

They expressed the opinions that information obtained in the investigation probably would be submitted to a Federal grand jury now impaneled at Wilmington, Del.

OPA officials are confident they will be able to break the poultry black market just as they said they had scattered the black market in meat.

The local poultrymen yesterday complained that farmers in this area are forcing them to pay the same prices for live birds that the farmers are now getting selling to suspected black market operators.

The result of the action, which will become effective today, will be the poultry supply coming into Washington will practically cease, Danzansky said.

He said that some time ago they had asked the OPA to give them some relief and were requested by OPA for three exten-

R.A.F. Bombers Again Hammer Italian Base

British Airmen Fly 1350 Miles to Pound Warships at Spezia

By Rice Yahner
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, April 19.— Throwing its mighty home-based bomber arm into the battle to finish off the Axis in Africa, the R. A. F. crossed the Alps in strong force overnight to deliver for the second time in a week a violent attack on Italian fleet units huddled in the Spezia naval base on the northwest coast of Italy.

A single bomber was lost in this long-distance assault—a 1350-mile round trip.

The big Spezia roadstead and fitting basins were hard hit, one returning pilot reporting that he had counted six fires in the clear night.

The Italian fleet has so far avoided the Allied forces, while Naples and the Sicilian harbors are being persistently blasted by the Allied Middle East air force, perhaps because of Axis conviction that it may be desperately needed before the Tunisian fighting is ended.

The raid was accompanied by other British sweeps over northern France and against the German U-boat nest at Lorient, France.

In northern France, enemy freight trains and locomotives were attacked by fighter bombers; at Lorient two German destroyers were hit by cannon fire. On the destroyer an explosion was heard.

This attack was officially described as "heavy and concen

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, April 19.—Allied airmen have destroyed 96 Axis planes, including 68 big Junkers freight and troop transports, in less than a day and a half of savage attacks against the enemy's aerial supply line to Marshal Erwin Rommel's troops in Tunisia, the Allied command disclosed today.

Fifty-eight enemy transports were sent flaming to earth and into the sea in one destructive engagement yesterday when an Axis outbound convoy was ambused at the northeastern tip of Tunisia, and 10 more of the three-engined aerial freighters were destroyed within a few hours today. Sixteen Axis fighters were shot down as they tried ineffectually to protect their unwieldy charges yesterday and another was destroyed today.

[The International News Service quoted a Stockholm dispatch as saying that violent naval fighting had broken out in the Sicilian Straits between Tunisia and Sicily.

100 Planes in Convoy

[The International News Service reported further that the Berlin correspondent of the Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau, according to a Reuters Stockholm dispatch, quoted a Rome radio report that British destroyers were attacking Axis convoys, escorted by warships, bound for Tunis.]

[Possibility was seen that the transports may have been evacuating troops (at least specialists or high officers) from Africa.]

Of the other 11 enemy planes destroyed, five were shot down in a night raid by German bombers on Algiers.

(Military spokesmen in Cairo said transports shot into the Mediterranean and onto the beaches and rocky hillsides of northeastern Tunisia were loaded with troops.)

Fighter pilots patrolling the Sicilian Straits late yesterday afternoon sighted the huge formation of Junkers, with strong fighter protection, flying toward Sicily almost at water level. Long Pull Ahead

District's War Loan Quota More Than Half Subscribed

The District has hit its stride in its second war loan drive and last night had subscribed more than half of its 42-million-dollar nonbank quota. The official figure stood at $21,356,581.50

But Wilmer J. Waller, chairman of the District of Columbia War Finance Committee's Banking Division, could see little reason for optimism in these figures.

"The main balance of the District quota must come from individual investors," he said. "This will be done only if each citizen invests on a basis consistent with his duty and responsibility to those who are fighting for preservation of our way of living."

The total quota for the District is 70 million dollars of which 28 millions are expected to come from banks and investment houses.

On a national scale the picture was much the same. By Saturday night, the Treasury announced, a total of $9,953,000,000 had been subscribed—75 per cent of the total sought—but individuals had bought only $403,000,000.

The cream of the drive has been scraped off, Secretary Morgenthau said, and the squeezing of the skimmed milk will come much harder.

"Up to this point," he said, "I am sorry to say that our reports do not reflect purchases by the individual buyer of small denomination bonds in an amount as great as we expect and must have.

"However, I must hasten to add that we all have great confidence that in the remaining two weeks the people will put their hearts into the job."

At least the business division of the District is getting into gear, for its chairman, Edgar Morris, reported yesterday that $748,000 had been raised through Saturday and that enthusiasm is running high among the workers in his division.

Also beating the bushes in the individual investor category are two vice chairmen, 12 team captains and 100 workers under Chairman Fred G. Holderman, jr., of the Investment Underwriters Division. The 14 teams so far have made 262 sales for a total of $209,175, Holderman reported at a meeting of division chairmen yesterday. Reports from other divisions are expected about bidweek.

The Federal Reserve Bank at Richmond reported sales of bonds totaling $113,721,711 in Maryland and $43,473,132 in Virginia to other than commercial banks and investors. Hereafter, the bank announced, Fifth District figures, which include Washington, will be issued on a weekly basis.

Meanwhile, I. Clark Brown, chairman of the Investment and Security Division of the District War Finance Committee, announced that his own firm, Brown, Goodwyn and Olds, had purchased $25,000 in second war loan securities.

The B'nai Israel congregation will hold a second war loan rally at the synagogue at Fourteenth and Emerson Streets Northwest at 9

Treasury Leads With $1127 As GIRL Fund Reaches $56,487

Spurning water underfoot and overhead yesterday, key workers from 18 agencies in the GOVERNMENT GIRL warplane campaign late in the day reported to the Treasury Department with $6627 to swell the total for the drive to $56,487.

The Treasury Department itself worried little about the weather, and led all agencies for the day with contributions totaling $1127.

The Navy Department was second highest with a daily total of $962 and the War Production Board in third place with $602.

Announcement was made that all of the 225,000 Government Girl lapel tags had been distributed. More are being printed and will be distributed at once, according to Miss Eleanore Leech of the council of personnel office.

Workers still find in some instances hesitancy on the part of men workers to contribute. Many of them at the campaign's start had believed only girl Government workers could take part. This error, however, is fast dying away.

Campaign leaders again stressed the necessity of dollar limits. It is easy enough to contribute more than a dollar if an employe so desires, but each separate contribution should be made in the name of an individual.

Sugar rationing may be an inconvenience, but Mrs. Emma Samuel doesn't let it bar her from making candy once in a while Particularly when it has to do with the Government Girl campaign.

Mrs. Samuel made a modest quantity of it recently, then took it down to the general files section of the RFC, where she is employed, and sold it.

The $33 she realized from the candy she applied to the Government Girl warplane fund in the name of former RFC employes now in the armed service. They are Bill Brady, J. H. Andrews, R. Bellamy, A. J. Skipper Is Rescued

Ten Sea Scouts Are Drowned When Cabin Cruiser Capsizes

By the Associated Press

Islip, N. Y., April 19 (AP).—Ten sea scouts drowned and their skipper was rescued today after their cabin cruiser capsized and sank in Great South Bay.

Five of the bodies and the sole survivor, Fred Mayer, 30, of North Bellmore, Long Island, were picked up by a passing vessel which found them near an overturned dinghy. Two other bodies were found later in the same area by Coast Guard searchers.

Two of the dead were identified as Stanley Kelinsky and Roy Hanson. Their ages and addresses were not available immediately.

Captain Robert Maynard, master of the rescue vessel, said Mayer, the survivor, was so weak when they threw him a line that two members of the crew had to leap overboard and tie it around him. He was taken aboard with five bodies, and sailors applied artificial respiration while the vessels headed for Patchogue, Long Island, a 20-minute trip.

Police and Coast Guard authorities searched the area in boats for the three other bodies.

Mayer related this account of the tragedy:

A huge wave smashed the hatch door of the Legionnaire, sweeping one of the boys overboard.. Two others, without stopping for their life preservers, launched the dinghy and set out after their shipmate. A wave capsized the dinghy and Mayer saw no more of any of the three.

Meanwhile, water poured into the hatch door. The vessel's bow pointed downward and she began to sink. The boys donned life preservers, and before they could jump they were hurtled overboard as the craft sank.

Police established that the boys, under Mayer, the third mate of Sea Scout Ship 14, had set out yesterday for a seamanship training cruise on the S. S. S. Legionnaire, a ship presented to them some time ago by the Rockville

End of War Is Not In Sight—Goebbels

1600 Germans Die

Reds Block Fierce New Nazi Drives

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), April 20.—Fierce New German attacks launched reckless of costs in attempts to widen their bridgehead in the Caucasus near Novorossisk have been repulsed with about 1600 more Nazis killed and 17 planes destroyed, the Russians announced today.

Fighting Monday at times "developed into hand-to-hand clashes" as the Germans kept up repeated counterattacks striving "at all costs to drive back the Red army squeezing ever closer to Novorossisk, said the midnight communique as broadcast by Moscow and recorded by the Soviet monitor.

All of Monday's attacks were repelled, with two battalions of enemy infantry, or about 1600 troops, wiped out, the Russians said, bringing the four-day toll in determined fighting to nearly 8000 German troops killed and 42 planes downed on this front as the Nazis threw air power in support of ground forces.

Twenty-five planes had been reported shot down Sunday. Fighter planes downed 13 more yesterday, and antiaircraft gunners bagged four, the midnight war bulletin said, while seven other German planes were damaged.

Artillery and infantry fire killed about 150 Germans and wiped out two enemy mortar batteries.

Goering Proclaims Faith on Eve of Hitler's Birthday

By the Associated Press

London, April 19. — Reichsmarshal Goering and Propaganda Minister Goebbels proclaimed Germany's faith in Hitler and victory today on the eve of the dictator's fifty-fourth birthday anniversary, but Goebbels added that the end of the war was nowhere in sight.

Goering's pronouncements were made in a proclamation to the German people and in an order of the day to the armed forces. Goebbels broadcast over the Berlin radio and the accounts were recorded here by the ministry of information.

The Berlin radio, recorded by the Associated Press, said Hitler would spend his birthday at his headquarters where, it said, he listened tonight to broadcasts beginning the celebration.

"Nothing is known so far about any special receptions or demonstrations," it added.

Goebbels was grimmer than usual in this declaration:

"The German people celebrate the birthday of the Fuehrer this year in a particularly serious mood. The war is in its fourth year and has reached its hardest stage so far and the end or a way out of its burdens and sufferings are at present nowhere in sight."

Goering's pronouncement to the troops said:

"We will demonstrate in the future, as we have done in the past, that we will follow the glorious German flag in accordance with your oaths as brave soldiers—in any hours and in any fight on land and sea in any area with the greatest readiness to sacrifice.

"How comforting it must be to the people to see at the helm of the nation a man who visibly embodies its unshakable faith in victory.

"We will show to the world our knowledge that our arms cannot be conquered and our certainty of the eternal greatness of Germany. . . . We salute the first soldier of the Reich. Heil to our Fuehrer."

Implying defections from the German war effort, Goebbels declared:

"If the people must shoulder great risk to preserve their existence, it is better to ba.. the devil of doubt and discord and to concentrate steadfastly on a historical mission. If that begins to be found wanting, it is the beginning of the end.

"Today on the eve of his fifty-fourth birthday, we gather together again as always has been our custom to offer the Fuehrer a people united and welded together in awe for his person and his historical work.

Hitler Frames Bid for Peace, London Says

By International News Service

London, April 20 (Tuesday).—Allied and neutral diplomats in Stockholm were quoted by the London Daily Express today as saying that Adolf Hitler is preparing to make a peace bid.

These sources said Hitler has drawn up two plans to save the Nazi regime. One is a peace offer, the other a war of attrition in the event the peace offer falls.

It was said that Hitler probably would make his peace offer in a speech today on the occasion of his fifty-fourth birthday, or possibly over the weekend.

The Italian communique reported that Spezia was one of several targets attacked by "four-engined American bombers," thus suggesting either some confusion among the Italian command or the possibility that United States planes had attacked the base in conjunction with the British—a suggestion that had no confirmation in Allied quarters.

Aside from Spezia, the Italians reported that Palermo and Ragusa in Sicily, and Porto Torres in Sardinia had been bombed by American airmen.

Swedish Protest As Nazi Ship Fires on Sub

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, April 19.—An armed German merchant ship fired on the Swedish submarine Draken inside Sweden's territorial waters off the west coast last Friday near the location where a Swedish underseas boat, the Ulven, was lost on the same day, the foreign office declared today, and it announced that a vigorous protest has been lodged with Berlin. Sweden views the incident gravely. The Draken was not hit.

Rescue workers still are trying to make contact with the Ulven and there are indications that some at least of the cre wof 33 may still be alive.

The foreign office issued a communique saying that "in view of the location and time of the incident, information was sought in Berlin whether any details may be obtained from the German merchant ship which may contribute to spread light over the circumstances of the loss of the Ulven."

The foreign office said the Swedish government took a serious view of the incident, which came during a controversy over transport of German soldiers on leave between Germany and Norway via Sweden, and over the flight of German planes last week over the Swedish naval base at Karlskrona.

A foreign office spokesman said the Germans had promised an investigation.

A spokesman said nothing had yet been discovered indicating why the Ulven sank, but said the submarines were maneuvering in an area thick with mines laid by the Germans and the British.

British Fleet Attacking Axis Convoy

In a matter of minutes the transports, afire, were plunging to earth. Most of them crashed on land in the vicinity of Cap Bon, 50 miles northeast of Tunis.

[The International News Service quoted the London Daily Mail as saying "at least 1000 key officers and men" of Rommel's Africa Corps were among those "believed to have perished."]

The transports can carry 16 to 20 men. There were estimated to have been more than 100 in the convoy, of which fewer than half escaped. In addition, 16 of their escorting fighters were shot down, bringing to 74 the number of enemy craft destroyed in the savage engagement.

(Cairo said it was almost entirely an American victory, although British planes provided top cover while the Americans chopped down the troop-carriers.)

Pilots of some of the transports which escaped the first blast from the Warhawks were reported to have made crash landings on the Tunisian beaches, only to have Allied fighters hunt them down and blast them. The slaughter was on a scale not before reached in the air in the Mediterranean theater. In addition to the planes destroyed, another 30 were damaged. A Cairo communique said that nine American ships were lost but that the pilot of one was known to be safe, while an official statement issued here said the toll was seven planes.

Only over England has the German air force ever taken a worse beating. At the climax of the Battle of Britain the R. A. F. shot down 185 Nazi planes on September 15, 1940, and 13 days later bagged 130 raiders in one day.

The ambush of the transport convoy was only one of a series of exploits in which Allied fliers and ground gunners shot down 85 Axis planes during the day and night and punished enemy air fields, ports, freight yards and defense positions throughout the Mediterranean area.

American Flying Fortresses gave Palermo its third bombardment in three days, concentrating on the railroad yards of the Sicilian port, choked with military supplies.

Another fortress formation attacked nearby Boca de Falco air field, hitting stores, ammunition dumps, administration buildings and barracks. Mitchell Medium Bombers raided the Alghero-Fertilla air field on Sardinia dropping bombs among 40 to 50 dispersed bombers and transports.

Observers said they saw one very large explosion in Tunis during Saturday night's attack by the R. A. F.'s Wellington Bombers.

2 Ships Struck

One Axis cargo ship was left sinking and another burning after Mitchell bombers attacked Porto Torres, Sardinia, yesterday and a supply ship was left down by the stern and listing after Malta-based craft caught her in the central Mediterranean.

Five of the 85 Axis aircraft destroyed within 24 hours were bombers shot down during the Germans' second straight night raid on Algiers last night. The Allied communique said only a few raiders penetrated the city's defenses.

Limited ground fighting in Tunisia saw French forces capture the Rag El Hedij, a mountain position 40 miles west of Enfidaville, coastal anchor of Marshal Erwin Rommel's 140-mile defense line.

5 Enemy Bases In New Guinea Area Bombed

Allied Headquarters in Australia, Tuesday, April 20 (AP).—Allied bombers started fires in attacks on Koepang and Financhhafen Monday, the high command reported today.

Koepang is at the southwest tip of Dutch Timor, approximately 500 miles northwest of Darwin, Australia. Finschhafen is on the Huon Peninsula of New Guinea, about 60 miles from the Japanese base of Lae.

Altogether, five enemy airdromes in New Britain and New Guinea were lightly raided by the Allies, the noon communique reported.

Airdromes bombed included those at Hollandia, Dutch New Guinea; Cape Gloucester and Gasmata, New Britain.

Medium bombers bombed and strafed the building area at Wald Bay, New Guinea, in a night attack.

A single plane attacked Finschhafen.

Allied Planes Sink 5 U-Boats

London (Tuesday), April 20 (AP).—Allied planes joined the defense of two important convoys in mid-March and probably destroyed five submarines and seriously damaged many others in a four-day running battle, the air ministry news service said today.

An unspecified number of ships was lost, but attacks were reduced sharply when the battle came within range of the Flying Fortresses, Liberators and Sundrelauds. In four days the bombers delivered 19 attacks, dropping hundreds of depth charges.

The ministry claimed no actual kills, but said there was evidence of five submarines probably destroyed and many others damaged severely.

The ministry called the battle "one of the most ferocious of the war between aircraft and U-boats."

War Sidelights

Axis Warship Active Off Brazil, Berlin Says

By the Associated Press

New York, April 19.—The Berlin radio reported from Buenos Aires today that a large Axis auxiliary warship had penetrated Brazilian waters and sunk a merchant ship near Fortaleza.

"Efforts of the Brazilian fleet, supported by the American Air Force, have not yet discovered this ship," added the report, recorded by the Associated Press. Fortaleza is on the northern shore of the Brazilian bulge. Nationality of the warship was not specified.

Reports of the sinking or the presence of the auxiliary in Brazilian waters were unconfirmed by any Allied source.

Slaying Story Held Ruse

Moscow, April 19 (AP).—Pravda, official organ of the Communist Party, declared today the Polish government in exile in London was "inexcusably caught on the hook" of Nazi propaganda when it requested the International Red Cross to investigate a German story that 10,000 Polish officers had been slain by Russians in the Smolensk district.

(A Swiss radio broadcast recorded by the Associated Press in London said today "the International Red Cross, which was requested by London and Berlin to investigate the alleged killing of Polish officers near Smolensk, will proceed with the task immediately.")

Pravda said the German reports were "base inventions" designed to cover atrocities which the Nazis themselves committed and asserted that names and other alleged "evidence" cited in Berlin were entirely fictitious.

Tokyo Fliers Meet

Somewhere in North Africa, April 18 (Delayed).—Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle and 13 fliers who accompanied him on the flight over Tokyo and now are serving under him in this theater celebrated the first anniversary of the famous raid today with dinner at a farmhouse near advanced headquarters.

The general spent the day working before leaving for the party. Two of the group, Capt. William R. Pound, jr., of Kents Store, Va., and Capt. Howard A. Sessl of Arlington, Mass., went on missions earlier in the day.

President Asks 2½ Billion More In War Funds

President Roosevelt submitted to Congress yesterday additional appropriation requests totaling $2,514,538,000 for the fiscal year beginning July 1. A major share was allocated to the War Shipping Administration for the Merchant Marine.

The President's requests, presented to the House, included:

War Shipping Administration—$2,372,350,000, which included $50,000 each for the Merchant Marine schools operated by the States of California, Maine, Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania.

Office of War Information—$47,342,000 for the organization headed by Elmer Davis.

War Relocation Authority—$48,170,000, largely for handling the expense involved in the relocation of Japanese residents of this country who were interned when Pearl Harbor was attacked.

Nazis May Mine U. S. East Coast

By the Associated Press

Naval experts said yesterday that German submarines might resort to extensive use of mines in American coastal waters this spring or summer as part of their offensive against United Nations shipping.

This would mean, for the present war, a new development of U-boat tactics on this side of the Atlantic. The undersea raiders employed mines over here last summer, but only to a limited extent.

What makes their use much more likely this year, authorities said, is the increased effectiveness of United States off-shore anti-submarine weapons. Planes, blimps and small boats in numbers many times those available a year ago now patrol the coastal sea lanes and give hour-by-hour protection to convoys.

TO SELL IS HUMAN TO "KNOCK" IS TO "BAIT"

When something is advertised, the public has the right to believe it is for sale. The pulic knows, too, that what is advertised is usually attractive and desirable.

The "bait" advertiser knows all this too. He will deliberately advertise what he cannot or will not sell at the announced figures, to force you to buy something else for more money. He will "knock" the advertised article, say it is "no good," "pooh pooh" its wearing qualities, make this excuse or that.

To sell is human, to buy is fine. But good advertisers (and they far outnumber those who are not) will never "knock" or disparage advertised merchandise to force you to buy something else. They know advertising builds confidence and that "bait" tactics destroy it.

When, at the expense of the public and that great majority of good advertisers who will not employ such tricks, "bait" sales methods are tried on you, report them promptly. An investigation will be made immediately and when facts justify, appropriate action taken.

Giraud Proposes Martinique Control

Memorandum to De Gaulle Calls for Council To Conduct War Effort Till France Is Freed

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The official text of the unity memorandum which Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, High Commissioner of French Africa, sent to Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, on April 1 was made public here last night by General Giraud's French military mission.

The memornadum, already rejected in part by the de Gaullists in London, calls for the creation of a council made up of colonial governors and others, which council, together with an executive committee, would conduct the French war effort and run the French overseas empire until France itself is liberated.

Metropolitan France would not be represented in the council, it being General Giraud's contention that a lawful government for France cannot be set up until the homeland is liberated. General de Gaulle doesn't see it that way.

Martinique Mentioned

The memorandum says that all French overseas territories, as and when they are liberated, will be placed under the authority of the council. It then mentions Martinique, the French Caribbean island whose leader, Admiral Georges Robert, has refused to line up either with the Giraudists or De Gaulleists.

"This also implies," says the memorandum, "that certain territories such as Martinique will have to submit without delay to this authority. . . ."

Francois Briere, press attache of the French Military Mission, who made public General Giraud's memorandum, was asked about this strong language concerning Martinique. Suppose, it was suggested, that Admiral Robert refused to "submit without delay." What would be the consequences?

Mr. Briere read this paragraph in the French text. So did some of the French-speaking correspondents. All agreed that a better translation would have said that territories like Martinique "are to join," or that "it is contemplated that they shall join" the council.

Three Main Phases

The Giraud unity program envisions three phases, as follows:

1. At the outset, before Allied armies begin landing in France, the council (to be known perhaps as the French Council of Overseas Territories)would conduct the war and administer the colonies.

2. When Allied troops landed in France, the council would follow. It would revive the laws of France in the liberated territory and administer the territory in cooperation with the Conseils Generaux (local department governments).

3. When France is entirely liberated, the council would deliver its powers to a provisional government to be created in accordance with a French law of 1872, under which France was governed between her defeat by Germany in 1870 and the creation of the Third Republic in 1875. This provisional government would be created by an assembly made up of delegates elected by the Conseils Generaux. It would represent France in the peace conference and fix the date for the election of a national assembly.

Troublesome Proviso

An important proviso in the Giraud memorandum, and one that caused something of a storm in De Gaullist ranks in London, would give the French high command extraordinary powers after the invasion of France.

This paragraph in the memorandum says:

"When the Allied armies enter France, the French high command will insure order. The latter will provisionally appoint, by delegation from the council, the military authority in each liberated department which will be responsible both for the execution of administrative functions and for police powers within the framework of the law. These appointments will in their essence be of a nonpolitical character."

This is one of two points which, according to dispatches from London, were particularly objectionable to the Fighting French.

Dangerous Power Seen

It was felt that this was a dangerous power to give to the military, particularly since nothing is said about how long such power might be exercised. The French parliamentary group, made up of 11 members of France's last Parliament, met in London last week and insisted that military authority in France must be subordinated to civilian control.

The other objection raised by the Fighting French was based on the fact that General Giraud's proposed council would not include representatives of the various underground, anti-Nazi groups in France itself. The best known of these are the Socialist Committee of Action, the French Communist Party and the French Workers Movemen..

The Fighting French delegation here yesterday issued a release telling of a "recent increase in sabotage activities in France—cutting of rail lines, dynamiting wharves, and so on.

A De Gaullist Frenchman here said that these activities are now not merely acts of individuals, but are parts of an organized campaign. He emphasized, too, that much of the sabotage was taking place in an area around Calais, a likely invasion point.

Navy Announces New Casualties

The Navy announced yesterday 27 casualties in Navy forces, including 2 dead and 25 missing. This brings to 24,846 the total of Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties reported to next of kin since December 7, 1941. The grand total includes 7128 dead, 4665 wounded and 13,053 missing.

Harmon, After Crash in Jungle, Found 2 of Crew Dead in Plane

By the Associated Press

Paramaribo, Surinam, April 19. Lieut. Tommy Harmon, who had been missing after his plane crashed in the jungle April 8, was at a U. S. Army base at this Dutch Guiana port today, tired but in good condition.

Harmon, a former Michigan football star, was examined by an Army physician, but hospitalization was not necessary, it was learned.

The flier parachuted down into the French Guiana jungle when his plane, Old 98—named for the numerals he bore on his jersey during his football days—crashed.

He found the wreckage of his plane and in it the bodies of two crew mates. After wandering through the jungle for four days, he met natives who guided him to a settlement.

The U. S. Army was reported combing the jungles for other missing crew members.

Harmon had been missing since April 6. On April 14 the War Department sent his family in Ann Arbor, Mich., formal notification that he was missing, but his mother insisted that he would show up safe. On Saturday, the War Department reported that he was alive.

Telephones Parents

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 19.—Lieut. Tom Harmon telephoned his parents from "somewhere in South America" today, and reported, "I'm not hurt," following his experiences after the crash of an Army bomber last week.

"I'm safe and well," the former Michigan football star said, but gave no details of his experience.

When asked about other members of the plane's crew, Tom replied that he had not heard whether they were safe.

In Washington, the Army said that five of the crew members of the plane piloted by Harmon still are listed as missing.

Second Lieut. Edwin J. Wolf, navigator, Philadelphia.

Second Lieut. Frederick O. Wieting, Lansing, Mich.

Sergt. Leonard D. Gunnells, Deatsville, Ala.

Staff Sergt. Bernard R. Coss, Mendota, Ill.

Staff Sergt. James F. Goodwin, Texarkana, Tex.

Senate Calls for Showdown On Charges Made Against OWI

The Senate yesterday moved for a showdown with Federal officials on charges that the Office of War Information tends to give Government activities a favorable "slant," that OWI and the Budget Bureau actually subject agency heads to censorship and that American foreign propaganda is unnecessarily shrouded in secrecy and is comparatively ineffective.

Senators' suspicion that Federal information services are failing to give a wholly accurate picture of events at home and abroad was given tangible manifestation in a series of developments as Congress received from President Roosevelt a request for $47,343,000 to run OWI for the next fiscal year.

Full Accounting

A full accounting of OWI activities is certain to be demanded by the appropriating committees of Congress, especially in view of the fact that the agency received 36 millions for the fiscal year ending next June 30. These were the developments:

1. The Senate Judiciary Committee unanimously approved a resolution by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming, calling for a full investigation of OWI, stressing conflicts over news policies.

2. Judiciary Committee Chairman Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana arranged with OWI Chief Elmer Davis to launch the inquiry by having Davis conduct a press conference before the committee in the Senate Office Building caucus room at 4 p. m. tomorrow. After Senators are shown how he handles a conference, Van Nuys said, a plan of investigation will be worked out by Davis and the committee in a closed session.

Wants Material Filed

3. Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio introduced resolutions which would require OWI and the coordinator of Inter-American Affairs to file with the Senate clerk all propaganda material, printed, recorded or photographed, unless, in the case of OWI, such material is certified to be a military secret by general staffs of the Army or Navy.

4. In discussing the Judiciary Committee action with reporters, Senator O'Mahoney scored the Administration's policy of requiring agency heads to clear with the Budget Bureau before expressing an official opinion on legislation before Congress.

Because of the "tremendous power" wielded by the Budget Bureau over the publicly expressed opinions of Federal officials, O'Mahoney declared, some agency heads "have been reduced to office boys."

Become Dominant Forces

The policy of having Federal informatoin services clear through OWI, he added, is "tending to build up another such agency with the result that "OWI and the Budget Bureau are by way of becoming dominant forces in the Government."

The Senator added that it was "obvious" after Secretary of War Stimson's press conference comments on General MacArthur's call for more planes that a "definite line of policy" was being laid down to the press that was "deprecating the importance of the Southwest Pacific and playing down Chinese and MacArthur's pleas."

OWI and Nelson Rockefeller's Coordinator's Office, the agencies covered by Taft's resolution, have refused to make texts of short-wave broadcasts available to reporters.

"Futile and Idiotic"

Taft told the Senate:

"Ugly rumors are abroad that much of this short-wave broadcasting is futile and idiotic, and very inferior to that of other nations."

Commenting on Taft's resolution, Davis told the Associated Press he was willing to file with the Senate anything asked for.

Other OWI officials observed that the filing of all overseas broadcasts would provide the Senators with a vast amount of reading matter. They said there are 6000 programs a week in a total of 24 languages.

"I will work; I will save; I will sacrifice; I will endure. I will fight cheerfully and do my utmost; as if the whole struggle depended on me alone."
—(Excerpt from the diary of Martin Treptow, who fell at Chateau-Thierry.)

THE DICTIONARY SAYS that a patriot is "one who loves his country and zealously supports its authority and interests." Martin Treptow, soldier, was a patriot. There are millions more like him in our armed forces today. The Smith family are patriots on the home front . . . and there are millions like them.

They are working. They are saving. They are making the small sacrifices they are called upon to make. They will endure whatever befalls them to endure. They are doing their utmost, as if the whole struggle depended upon them. The only thing they are not doing . . . yet . . . is fighting, and Art Smith, father, may be doing that, too, before long.

• • • •

You, too, are supporting the interests of your country when you work, sacrifice, and save . . . save by buying more War Bonds . . . save by saving more in a savings account.

Buy all the War Bonds you can afford to keep. War Bonds help finance the War; help keep down inflation; and they are a good investment for you. After you have done this, then . . .

Save in a savings account the money you need as an emergency reserve . . . and to meet recurring expenses such as insurance premiums, taxes, fuel bills, school tuition, mortgage curtails or interest, and home repairs. Money in a savings account likewise helps finance the War and keep down inflation. Practically all new savings money deposited in banks is now being invested by the banks in Government Bonds.

Work. Save. Do your utmost, as if the whole struggle depended upon you. And for whatever counsel or help you need, come to The Morris Plan Bank of Washington . . . the bank that is alert to your needs, alive to your way of life, as an individual . . . the bank to which more than 50,000 Washington men and women already look for down-to-earth guidance with their wartime financial affairs.

award General MacArthur can make.

At her home last night, Mrs. Catherine Knode was caring for her third child, 7-month-old Suzanne, whom the hero-father has never seen, but soon will.

Knode is now at the Percy Jones Hospital, Battle Creek, Mich., where he is under treatment. He's coming home on furlough next month and will be wearing the Purple Heart.

Has Flying Cross

Major Thorne, whose wife, Jean Claggett Thorne, is a former employe of the National Geographic Society, holds the Distinguished Flying Cross. The day before the fall of Bataan, Thorne, though feverish and weak from an attack of malaria, flew from Bataan to Iloilo, on Panay in the Philippines.

Into the baggage compartment of his pursuit plane he crowded several passengers. With that extra burden and a bomb load besides, he took off at night from an unlighted field, dropped his bombs over the Japanese lines and then, without navigation instruments, flew 300 miles to Iloilo and safety.

Colonel Hardison, one of Washington's most decorated representatives in the Southwest Pacific war theater, received the Silver Star for "gallantry in action;" three Bronze Oak Leaf Clusters to the Silver Star and the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster.

Hardison, B-17 pilot and squadron commander, returned to the United States with men and officers of the famed Nineteenth Bombardment Group. The story of air war against the Japs in the Rabaul and Buna areas is dotted with his name.

Sergeant Blakely, assigned to Hardison's bomber, received the Silver Star after action at Madjene, Java, February 28, 1942.

Silver Stars Awarded

Silver Stars also have been won by Private Wangler, Sergeant Connor, who is credited with shooting down one Jap Zero plane and damaging two others which attacked his B-25 when it returned to a base in New Guinea last May 10; Colonel Mott for the "disregard of personal danger" whereby he "encouraged officers and men" of the two battalions he commanded in the December 1 attack on Buna village; by Lieutenant Baughman, for a PT-boat action off the mouth of the Kumusi River on the night of December 25-26, and by Lieutenant McIntyre who also holds the Distinguished Flying Cross for 59 operational missions as Fortress bombardier between December, 1941, and November, 1942.

Captain Bennett, for outstanding work as a medical officer under fire, holds the Silver Star with Oak Leaf Cluster.

The Silver Star and Purple Heart, as well as the Air Medal, have been awarded Lieut. Greeson.

THORNE BENNETT McINTYRE BLAKELY ROGERS

Medals for Gallantry Awarded 2 District Men

Brig. Gen. James P. Hodges of 4509 Argle Terrace Northwest has received the Distinguished Flying Cross, while Staff Sergt. Robert C. Blake, also of Washington, has been awarded both the Oak Leaf Cluster and the Air Medal, the War Department announced yesterday.

GEN. HODGES

The two local men were among 302 members of the United States Eighth Air Force who have recently been decorated in England for bombardment and escort operations against German-held territory and against the German air forces in the European area.

General Hodges, born in Oak Leaf, Md., on October 7, 1894, came to Washington as a child and attended Business High School (now Roosevelt) here. He recently was decorated with the Silver Star for gallantry and leadership on combat missions.

Commissioned in 1918

Enlisting as an aviation cadet in September 1917, he was commissioned in 1918 and has been on duty at Langley Field, Va., during the major part of his career with the Air Corps. A son, James P. Hodges, jr., is a preflight cadet at San Antonio, Tex.

Blake was born in the District on February 24, 1916, and attended McKinley High School, Strand Business School and Mallard Preparatory School. He was employed by Eastern Air Lines when he enlisted in the Air Corps, January 2, 1942. After basic training, he was graduated from the gunnery school at Boise, Idaho, the following summer, and went overseas in October.

SERGT. BLAKE

His wife, Jean, an employe of Jelleff's Department Store, resides at 3911 W Street Northwest, while his mother, Mrs. George Simons, lives at 5337 Broad Branch Road Northwest.

Maryland men cited:

Oak Leaf Cluster to Air Medal and Air Medal, Staff Sergt. Ray J. Smith of Easton; Oak Leaf Cluster, Staff Sergt. William V. Baker of Havre de Grace; Air Medals, Tech. Sergt. Mark L. Schaefer of Grantsville, Staff Sergt. Ray W. Armstrong of Catonsville and Sergt. Norris R. Phifer of Baltimore.

Virginia men:

Soldier's Medal, Tech. Sergt. Jesse W. Barrett of Clintwood; Oak Leaf Cluster to Air Medal, Tech. Sergt. Waverly C. Ormond of Norfolk and Staff Sergt. John E. Owen of Roanoke; Air Medal, Staff Sergt. Virgil Burgan of St. Charles.

HOW LEADING CIGARETTES COMPARE—FINDINGS OF DISTINGUISHED DOCTORS

Full reports by men high in the profession, of their findings in clinical and laboratory work

... as published by authoritative medical journals; sent regularly on request to physicians

MANY thousands of America's physicians already possess this series of reprints. They are the reports of distinguished medical men—covering not one, but many researches both clinical and laboratory.

They are now and always available to any physician upon request.

FOR THE PUBLIC—

Laboratory findings may be summed up—for the public—in this statement:

On comparison, the four other leading cigarettes averaged more than three times as irritant—with irritant effects lasting more than five times as long—as the strikingly contrasted Philip Morris.

The series of separate and independent clinical findings may be summarized thus:

When smokers changed to Philip Morris, every case of irritation of nose or throat, due to smoking, either cleared up completely, or definitely improved.

It is upon this basis of scientifically proved superiority for the nose and throat that we advise smokers to...

Defense Opens Case in Train Murder Trial

By the Associated Press

Albany, Oreg., April 19.—The defense, attempting to show that Robert E. Lee Folkes was not at the scene of the railroad slaying of a young Navy bride, opened its case today after Circuit Judge L. G. Lewelling had degied a request for a directed verdict of acquittal.

Defense Attorney Leroy Lomax tried to establish that Folkes, cook on a Southern Pacific train, was in the dining car galley at work before dawn January 23 when Mrs. Martha Virginia James, 21, was slain in her berth, lower 13.

Folkes, 20-year-old Los Angeles Negro, is charged with first degree murder.

E. A. Tetrick, Los Angeles police homicide squad lieutenant, testified that an oral statement in which Folkes denied having anything to do with the slaying had been transcribed in Los Angeles. A later oral statement, which Los Angeles officers said contained Folkes' admission that he killed Mrs. James, was admitted into evidence for the State last week.

The statement introduced by the defense was the first one Folkes made in Los Angeles and covered these points:

Folkes said he had been drinking heavily at Portland, Oreg., January 22 before he boarded the California-bound train. He went aboard but did not pass through sleeper D, the death car.

Folkes was up early the next morning, the statement read, and went immediately to the washroom in car D, then returned to the diner.

Half of D.C. Bond Quota Pledged

p. m. tomorrow, Samuel Eig, war bond chairman, announced. A meeting of the congregation last week sold $55,000 in bonds and Rabbi Henry Segal has announced that the quota for the congregation will be $155,000. Sefton Darr, chairman of the speakers division of the drive, will speak.

The Lodgia Columbia Garibaldi, affiliated with the Italian American Federation, also will hold a bond rally Wednesday night.

A total of $105,000 was reported as yesterday's total collections by the Globe Distributing Co., Eighth and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, whose 45 employes are devoting full time to bond sales between April 15 and May 1.

George Lane, disabled veteran, yesterday bought $500 worth of bonds and has pledged today's receipts from his liquor store at 1327 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast.

At different times in its history Vyazma, U. S. S. R., has been held by the Lithuanians, Poles and Germans.

McNutt to Ease Wage-Job Freeze Order

Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., told the Associated Press in New Orleans that there were "some features of the new directive which will need clarification."

"I haven't had time to study the directive carefully," Murray said, "but I think it will be necessary for a clarification of some features of the order, such as availability, power of the employer to hoard labor, and an explanation as to what the term 'full employment' as used in the directive means.

"I am sure that it is the intent of the WMC to protect the provisions of collective bargaining and wage agreements to protect the interests of individual workers in that regard and to use the workers where they can be best suited to further the war effort."

Other labor spokesmen—although declining comment officially—were inclined to question the advisability of the order. Both the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers and the A. F. of L. International Association of Machinists—two of the largest unions in the country—were expected to take unfavorable public stands on the order shortly.

One informed labor official expressed the opinion that labor would fare better under out-and-out national service legislation, rather than under a program drawing authority from an executive order of the President. Under a statute, he explained, workers' rights could be protetced legally, but rights acquired under an executive order would vanish with the end of the emergency.

Any attack on the McNutt order from labor was expected to center around the question of appeal machinery. Appeals from any action of a WMC official may be taken to his superior under present regulations. Union officials would prefer to have appeal power vested in the area, regional and national labor-management policy committees.

Explaining impending changes in the regulation, McNutt said:

"One will always be able to go to the War Manpower Commission if a proposed move is right—if it is not done just for higher wages. People will get a hearing. We are not trying to hurt anyone."

McNutt said appeals from WMC rulings could be taken right up the line to him. "And you won't need a lawyer, either," he added.

Asked if the WMC management-labor-agriculture policy committee had approved the order, McNutt replied that the policy behind the national job control order was set by the President in his "hold the line" price-wage order.

"I had to carry out the President's order," McNutt said. "It is not a matter of policy for the management-labor committee. I am responsible for it and will carry it out."

In areas subject to job stabilization plans, the new job-transfer order permits shifts under certain circumstances where an employer or the local office of WMC must grant certificates of availability, permitting workers to shift to higher pay.

Statements of availability are to be issued in cases where a worker is discharged by his last employer, has been laid off for an indefinite period, or can establish that his present employment does not use him at his highest skill on a full time basis.

These protections were not available to workers outside of stabilization areas under the original order, but are expected to be made available to workers everywhere under the amendment.

McNutt's order carried with it penalties which may be imposed on both employers and workers violating its provisions of $1000 in fines or a year in prison or both.

Poultry Trade Keeps Ceiling

sions in time. Then, yesterday morning, they were told there was no relief to be expected.

The poultrymen are now asking Food Administrator Chester Davis to fix a ceiling price on live birds at the farm in order that black market dealings will be stopped. He has not indicated whether he will comply with the request.

The dealers in the association represent 90 per cent of those in the District, and handle more than 90 per cent of the poultry coming into the District, it was said.

In addition to refusing to buy any more of the higher-priced poultry in protest against the exhorbitant prices, the dealers also authorized Danzansky to take the whole question up before Congress.

For weeks dealers have been complaining they have been receiving little, if any, dressed poultry from the West. They said this resulted from extreme demand for the birds in areas close to the farmers and also that the high price of eggs made it unprofitable for the farmers to kill their chickens.

And now it would appear the slender chicken supply in the city will be slashed to a mere trickle of the quantity needed to pad out meat-rationed menus.

Center, L. I., American Legion.

The ship, police said, anchored off Sayville, Long Island, over night and continued the cruise early this morning. At about 1 p. m., it was believed, they met rough weather. Captain Maynard said he thought a huge wave must have struck the 35-foot cabin cruiser, overturning it at a point between Fire Island and the mainland.

On five bodies recovered, Captain Maynard said, life preservers were found. The scouts were between 16 and 18 years old.

The ship was located several hours later, sunk in about 12 feet of water, Coast Guard authorities disclosed.

Congress Plans Summer Rest, First Since '39

A summer vacation for Congress, its first since 1939, will be sought this year, Capitol leaders disclosed yesterday.

The plan came to light on what would have been the first day of a two-week Easter vacation for the legislators—if lack of a pay-as-you-go tax bill had not interfered with the holiday plan.

Senate Republican Leader McNary said that he favored winding up necessary legislation and adjourning in midsummer. Tentative plans being discused by Senate and House leaders call for an adjournmennt about July 4, to continue over Labor Day in September.

Leaders of both parties made clear that an agreement to adjourn would be reached only if all necessary legislation were cleaned up—and then with the understanding that the members might be called back for emergency work.

On the Administration list of necessary legislation are the appropriation bills, and renewal of reciprocal trade, bituminous coal, and stabilization fund authorities. In addition, the fight is on to get a pay-as-you-go tax bill. Republican leaders made clear that the list might be enlarged by summer.

Congress' last formal summer adjournment came the month before the present war began. The legislators left town August 5, 1939, then were summoned to meet again, September 21, to consider repealing the Neutrality Act.

Since then Congress has been in session almost continually, although when the work grew light, a majority of members have gone away while a skeleton crew stayed at the Capitol to meet at three-day intervals and transact routine, noncontroversial business.

Treasury Leads Day's Contributions as GOVERNMENT GIRL Fund Soars Past $56,000 Mark

"I lost a nephew recently in a plane crash somewhere in the South Seas," Mrs. Samuel explained.

Miss Beatrice Lillico, a Government Girl worker in the Navy Department, has a number of posters and designs which she said recently that she would submit soon for consideration by the judges.

"I realize there is no particular provisions for them," Miss Lillico explained," but I just felt like they should be drawn."

Bill Nemeth, Federal Index reporter for WINX, again devoted the entire time of his regular Monday night broadcast, 7:45 to 8 p. m., to the Government Girl campaign.

Nemeth, who a week ago devoted his time to the Government Girl drive last night interviewed Donald Dawson, chairman of the Council of Personnel special committee; Mrs. Josephine James, campaign manager for the Navy Department; Mrs. Frances Kelley, Commerce Department chairman, and Claire Bingham, key worker for the WPB.

Following are further details on the campaign:

SELECTIVE SERVICE. Angus Gallagher, chairman. House Tax Compromise Fails Again

or two we may reach a unanimous agreement.

On the question of the amount and distribution of abatement the line-up yesterday appeared fixed on this line:

Abatement Plans

Republicans, backing away for the present from the 100 per cent abatement of one full year for all, were reported bargaining for a plan to limit 100 per cent abatement to those with incomes up to $5000, grant 75 per cent abatement from $5000 to $20,000 and 50 per cent abatement on incomes over $20,000. The abatement would be limited to earned income, with the proviso that all income up to $5000 would be classed as "earned." An alternative was 75 per cent abatement for every one, and a "rock bottom" compromise was believed to be 50 per cent for everyone.

Democrats, retreating from the "no abatement" positions, were understood to be ready to forgive about 40 per cent of the 1942 tax liability, through a plan originally suggested by Chairman Doughton for applying 1941 rates and exemptions to income of 1942, and spreading collections of this figure over several years on top of current payments at 1942 rates.

Naval Officer From District Lost on Plane

Jacksonville, Fla., April 19. (AP).—Lt. Comdr. Archiland W. Greenlee, 32, and Pfc. Douglas N. Blodgett, 21, U. S. Marine Corps, have been lost at sea during a training flight, officials at the Jacksonville Naval Air Station announced today.

The accident occurred last Friday. No trace of men or plane has been found.

Greenlee was a graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy and was the son of Capt. Halford R. Greenlee, U. S. Navy, retired, and Mrs. Greenlee of New Orleans. His wife also survives. Greenlee's permanent address was 5510 Thirty-ninth Street Northwest, Washington, D. C.

Devaluation Renewal Plea Is Not Asked

By the Associated Press

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau urged the House Coinage Committee yesterday to approve a two-year extension of the 2-billion-dollar stabilization fund, but did not ask renewal of the President's powers to devalue the dollar.

The Senate last week approved continuation of the stabilization fund, but declined to continue the dollar devaluation powers beyond June 30 when the present laws expire.

"I believe that a two-year extension of the power to devalue the dollar would be helpful," Morgenthau told the House committee, "but in view of the action taken by the Senate last Friday, I am here before your committee only to ask for the extension of the stabilization fund."

Urged Continuation

Testifying before the Senate Banking Committee Friday, Morgenthau had urged continuation of the presidential powers to devalue the dollar, contending that "we must frankly face the danger of competitive currency depreciation in the postwar period."

At the conclusion of his prepared statement, Representative Andresen (Democrat) of Minnesota asked Morgenthau whether there was any indication the Treasury might take steps to devalue the dollar further before the authority expires on June 30.

"I feel certain," Morgenthau replied, "that no further devaluation will be undertaken before June 30, unless I first come before the proper committee of Congress to consult with them before doing so."

Andresen asked whether there was any other authority whereby the Treasury might devalue the dollar. Morgenthau replied that under the Gold Reserve Act of 1870, reaffirmed in 1934, "something similar but not quite the same" could be achieved by changing the price of gold.

"However," the Secretary emphasized, "I have nothing in mind at present to cause me to recommend to the President that he change the price of gold."

Greenback Question

"Can you make use of the Thomas amendment to issue three billions in greenbacks?" Andresen inquired.

After conferring with his aides, Morgenthau replied:

"Yes, but I cannot see any immediate need for its use."

"If that is so, don't you believe it a good idea that the Treasury suggest that authority be repealed?" Andresen continued.

"We never ask for repeal, but if Congress saw fit to take the initiative in such repeal we would have no objection," Morgenthau said.

Representative White (Democrat) of Idaho said he understood there had been a break in United States currency in Argentina and other South American countries.

Morgenthau testified there had been no depreciation of United States dollars there "in accredited channels."

"That is looted currency," he said, "from Axis controlled quarters. We have depressed that currency all possible. We don't want it to have any value because it is of military importance to the Axis and deleterious to our country's war effort. That has nothing to do with stabilization and we are proud that we have been able to depress this currency."

'Gas' Ration Banned for Summer Commuting

No extra gasoline rations for summer home commuters or vacation travel will be allowed this year, OPA declared yesterday in an announcement released almost simultaneously with a report from the Public Roads Administration showing that the honor system for restricted driving has failed.

OPA stressed that rubber shortage through the country and low supplies of gasoline in certain areas makes it impossible to relax gasoline rations.

At the same time, OPA said that gasoline rations for nonoccupational boats will be denied outright this summer in the Eastern petroleum shortage area where low supplies already have forced drastic cuts in the basic rations for passenger automobiles.

The ban on extra gasoline for driving to and from temporary summer homes also was extended by OPA to boats used for this purpose in the Eastern shortage area. Rations for occupational boat uses will be granted on basis of applicant's need, but OPA stressed that occupational boating specifically does not include non-essential commercial activity such as sightseeing, pleasure parties, or fishing parties.

In cases where boats must be used to obtain necessary medical attention, food, or supplies, special rations will remain available, OPA said.

Automobile and boat restrictions on summer home travel become effective next Saturday.

As to vacationists, OPA said, motorists may use their A books for vacation travel if they wish, and car owners holding B books and C books for driving between their regular homes and work may use these rations for occupational travel to and from a summer home.

OPA warned, however, that these motorists need not expect extra rations for this purpose.

The Public Roads Administration of the Federal Works Agency reported that Sunday traffic on Eastern highways declined enormously when the ban on pleasure driving was clamped down January 7. But the traffic rose almost to former levels, the report stated, when the honor system was substituted in March.

Although seasonal increase in traffic may have influenced the rise in March, the report pointed out that Sunday traffic increased after the driving ban was lifted even though there previously had been a cut in the value of the gasoline coupon from 4 gallons to 3.

On the other hand, the ban on pleasure driving, the report stated, was reinforced by the cut in coupon values and contributed toward lessening traffic.

Earphone Owner Can't Find Shop Where He Left It

The shop that wrapped up the earphone for the man who was in a hurry a couple of weeks ago can get rid of it by calling David A. MacDonald at National 9716, extension 131.

Macdonald was an Army Air Corps pilot in France in World War I. That's why he has to bother with an earphone. Having gotten a new one from a Cincinnati factory, he dropped into a downtown store and asked them to package the old one for shipping.

Having more important things on his mind (he's a lawyer at the National Labor Relations Board) Macdonald forgot to note down the shop. After an extensive hunt of his own failed, he asked The Post yesterday to lend a hand.

Petroleum Council To Give 2 Millions To Relief Groups

Presentation of approximately two million dollars to the Red Cross, the USO, Army Relief and Navy Relief will be made by the Petroleum Industry War Council at a luncheon at the Statler Hotel May 5, William R. Boyd, jr., chairman of the council, announced yesterday.

The funds represent the difference between the penny-a-pound various units of the petroleum industry paid for scrap rubber and the price for which they sold it to the Rubber Reserve Co. as a result of the intense scrap rubber drive last summer.

President Roosevelt has sent congratulations to the council for having increased the Nation's rubber stockpile by more than 400,000 tons—an average contribution of almost 7 pounds for every man, woman and child in the country.

Three wire cutters had volunteered to see about that tank trap. Two of them were snuffed, one right after the other, like candles at a puff. Too fast to sputter or flicker. There was only one left, and he knew it . . . Yesterday he'd had a letter about the baby he'd never seen, and now might never see. That hadn't kept him from this job—but it didn't exactly help . . . And now came the signal, pre-arranged, to tell him he could come back, let it go, the hell with it, they'd find some other way to get around that trap. "So three of us came to bat," he said to himself, "and two of us went down swinging. And now they'll walk me, if I want that." But then he remembered, from his sand-lot days, what the side line kids always shouted: "Only takes one to hit it." . . . So he went ahead. And he made it! But one way only, without the return . . . Yet thanks to him the tanks got through, just where least expected, and the height was retaken. They buried him with the letter still in his hand.

Try as they will to tell us what's going on out there, the best of the correspondents find no words equal to the task of trying to make us understand the kind of endurance and heroism that is a commonplace to men in war and that the rest of us, here at home, never encounter in a lifetime. A Rickenbacker tries to tell us, to make us see how petty and trivial are the little discomforts of the so called "home front," when measured against the daily trials of men whose most constant companion is death. And we all try, more or less earnestly and more or less politely, to understand. But we still only scratch the surface of the facts, without ever glimpsing the truth beneath. That's why Esquire's role in wartime is something we discuss with the utmost diffidence. We find it flattering in the extreme to learn that Esquire is a favored magazine of America's armed forces, because we feel that these fighting men are the most important Americans of our time. If they, while engaged in the world's most important job, find this magazine a source of pleasure and enjoyment, then we are satisfied that Esquire, too, in its small way, is playing a part. They take to it, they tell us, "like a tonic," and the best current estimates show that a measurable percentage of them take that tonic regularly. It's a small part to play, surely, because a magazine is as useless as a mascot, in the actual grim game of kill or be killed, and it would be fatuous to attribute to it any greater importance than may be found in the fact that it serves as a bolster to morale, that it brings a smile to men who need one. And yet, today, what more important thing could be said of any magazine?

600 Japs Killed In 2 Mop-Up Drives, Chinese Claim

Chungking, April 19 (AP).—The Japanese have waged costly new campaigns in vain attempts to mop up Chinese bands operating behind the enemy's lines in at least four sectors and have lost 600 troops in two engagements alone, the Chinese high command said today.

A Japanese force sought to wipe out Chinese concentrations only 35 miles northeast of the great southern city of Canton, but was forced to retreat after suffering heavy casualties, the war bulletin said.

The communique confirmed reports from the front that heavy losses were suffered by a Japanese force of 7000 troops operating against the Chinese southeast of the Yangtze River port of Ichang in Hupeh Province.

More than 300 Japanese were killed, the communique said, in one sector of southern Shantung Province.

Near Suchow, important railway junction in north Kiangsu Province, the Chinese countered a drive and killed 300 more Japanese, the high command reported.

Committee Deaf to Steel Fraud Excuses

In a report concurred in by WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson, the Truman War Investigating Committee said yesterday it would "accept no excuse for fraud upon the Government" by any industrial firm's failure to comply fully with chemical and physical requirements in tests of plate steel.

Charging that some steel company officials who were not identified had "resorted to gossip and rumor" to suggest that there had been a 35 per cent slump in steel production because of the committee's exposure of faked inspection tests, the committee said it had asked all producers of steel plate to report any reduction "which they attribute to the requirement that they comply with Government specifications."

The report, filed in the Senate by Senator Mead (Democrat), New York, said Government agencies are studying the facts to determine whether it was safe to lower steel plate specifications.

Unless Found Safe

"Unless and until they find that it is safe to reduce their specifications, the committee and all Government agencies expect that the steel plate furnished will be in accordance with specifications," the report said.

It added that where elements of judgment existed, such as in the physical inspection by visual examination for ripples and lamination, "the committee agrees with Donald Nelson that care should be taken to exercise the judgment properly and not to be unnecessarily rigid."

This does not apply, the committee said, to chemical and physical tests that are capable of exact ascertainment.

In this connection, the committee recalled that Nelson recently telegraphed steel companies that inspectors should not be too strict, where questions of judgment are involved.

"Mr. Nelson desires to make it clear,' the report said, "that the telegram did not mean that specifications subject to exact ascertainment should be disregarded. He has requested the committee to include in its report a statement that he has read and concurs in the report."

The committee said borderline inspection cases "should be referred to the purchasing agencies for a determination by them as to whether they can accept substandard steel, and such steel should be so marked and used only in those places where it is subjected to less than average strain. . . .

"Where doubt exists, on those, a second test should be made. If there is a second failure, but by a very slight margin, the failure should be reported to the purchasing agencies and their instructions followed. Substandard steel plate should be paid for as such."

The committee reported it had recommended to all suppliers of Government materials that they check their inspection procedures, adding:

"It is useless to waste thousands of men and millions of dollars in inspections unless they are honestly made. The committee will accept no excuse for fraud upon the Government in matters relating in any way to the safety of our soldiers and sailors."

Little, Cashier Of Laurel Bank, Dies at His Home

Charles Eugene Little, sr., cashier of the Citizens National Bank of Laurel, died of a heart ailment yesterday at his home in the Maryland town. He was 64 years old.

Mr. Little, a native of Washington, was a resident of Laurel since boyhood and served as mayor for many years. He had been at the bank for 25 years and worked until his illness two weeks ago. He was a veteran of the Spanish American war and a member of the Maryland Bankers Association.

Funeral services will be at 3 p. m. tomorrow in St. Phillip's Church where Mr. Little was a vestryman. Burial will be in the church cemetery in Laurel.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Sue Edwards Little, a daughter, Lena Edwards Little, of Laurel; a son, Aviation Cadet Charles E. Little, jr., and a sister, Mrs. George Baldwin of Avon, Conn.

Aldace F. Walker, local society figure and oil man, who was charged with being drunk, disorderly, carrying a concealed weapon and discharging a firearm in the Club Troika last Saturday, had his case continued until April 28 yesterday in Municipal Court.

According to police, Walker, after several drinks, pulled out a revolver and shot at a clock in the night club on a bet that he couldn't hit it. He didn't. Walker, who was released on $1300 bond, resides at 3340 N Street Northwest.

resettlement projects.

"The interest of the Government in this work should be completely washed out and these projects which do not have the public approval should be abandoned," he said. The House voted for his proposal, which leaves the projects with the Department of Agriculture to close out.

In Paradoxical Position

The House upheld the appropriations committee's recommendation that the Government's crop insurance program be discontinued, despite efforts led by Representative Pace (Democrat) of Georgia, to "give the program more time to prove itself."

Representative Cooley (Democrat) of North Carolina, chairman of the committee investigating FSA, was put in the paradoxical position of defending the agency when he argued that its functions should not be transferred to the Farm Credit Administration.

"The appropriations committee has taken unto itself legislative prerogatives. The FCA is in no position to handle the farm tenant program and I'm sure does not wish to mix this type of loan program with its credit program," he declared.

Record Good, Voorhis Says

Representative Sparkman (Democrat) of Alabama read a letter from Dr. M. L. Wilson, director of the Extension Service, who said he considered there had been no duplication in the work of FSA and his agency. Under provisions of the bill as originally reported, all supervision and "visits to families with rural rehabilitation loans" would have been transferred to the Extension Service.

Representative Voorhis (Democrat) of California, also seeking to save FSA, declared the agency has a good record and that 91.6 per cent of its clients "are in good standing with their loans."

"These families have been salvaged. Their children are back in school and they have increased their food production more than any other group of farmers. For the FCA and the Extension Service to operate the farm security program would be virtually impossible," he said.

The appropriations committee itself took the lead in striking out provisions of the bill which would have made it impossible for the Government to make loans to farmers or farm groups until the loans had been refused by "private lending agencies."

Press May Get to Food Parley

proposed, would report daily to newspapermen on progress made in closed sessions.

Senate Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, acted as spokesman for Senators after they conferred with Acheson for nearly an hour.

Still Under Consideration

While declining to forecast what final arrangements will be made for reporting the food conference, Barkley told newsmen there was "some indication that present restrictions might be relaxed," but that the "subject is still under consideration."

From answers made by Barkley to reporters' questions and from the comment of other Senators who sat with Acheson, it was clear that the State Department's answer is very likely to be "no" to proposals from the Agricultural Committees of both houses that they be allowed to send "unofficial observers" to the conference.

Question of Diplomacy

Other Senators reported that Acheson questioned the diplomatic wisdom of permitting members of Congress to attend the conference when the national legislatures of other participating countries have not been invited to send representatives. Barkley's only comment on this was:

"That question would naturally occur to the State Department. I don't want to express an opinion about it."

Barkley and other Senators who conferred with Acheson emphasized and appeared to be satisfied with his explanation that the food conference is to be "exploratory" with no binding commitments by participating countries.

The full agenda of food subjects to be explored by the conference will be made public by the State Department in a few days, at which time final arrangements for press coverage will be announced, Barkley said.

"No Scheme to Put Over"

"This Government has no scheme to put over on other nations whose representatives will assemble here," Barkley declared. "We are only interested in producing facts about food supplies, shortages, consumption and food conditions in all countries."

One of the Senators who met with Acheson obtained from him the impression that knowledge of the President's "press gag" decision had not been allowed to reach foreign countries.

Referring to the fact that final decision is up to the President, Senator La Follette (Progressive) of Wisconsin commented: "I take it the gentleman (Acheson) is not able to speak definitely, but he has hopes."

Glover Estate Totals Million; Will Probated

The $1,218,000 estate of Mrs. Annie C. Glover, widow of the late George C. Glover, first president of the Riggs National Bank, who died here April 14 at the age of 86, was filed for probate yesterday in District Court, naming her son, Charles Carroll Glover, jr., and a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth de Marees van Swinderen, the chief beneficaries.

The petition for probate states that Mrs. Glover left personal property valued at $838,187. This included $819,327 in securities, cash at $8859 and furniture, jewelry and tangible property at $10,000.

Real property was listed at $422,630 as the assessed valuation. Three hundred and eigty thousand five hundred and forty-four dollars of this property is in the District and $42,086 in Montgomery County, Md.

Besides leaving the bulk of her estate to her son and daughter Mrs. Glover left $5000 each to her daughter and son-in-law, Mrs. Marion Glover and Reneke de Marees van Swinderen. Mrs. Glover was also bequeathed, together with Mrs. van Swinderen, who is the wife of the former Netherlands Minister to Britain, one-half of Mrs. Glover's furniture, jewelry and clothing.

The Children's Hospital here was left $1000, as was the vestry of St. Alban's Protestant Episcopal Church. Mahala Hill, described as a servant, was left $5000, and numerous lesser amounts were left to other servants.

In a codicil to the will, Rear Admiral Charles P. Kindleberger, a nephew, was left $300 as were 11 other nieces and nephews.

Improved property at 1703 K Street Northwest was left to three grandchildren, Mrs. Elizabeth Hoyer Miller, Charles C. Glover 3d, and Nancy Everett Glover. Mrs. Millar is the wife of the first secretary of the British Embassy.

James Rickey, Aluminum Firm Engineer, Dead

James W. Rickey, 71, former chief hydraulic engineer of the Aluminum Company of America, died at Emergency Hospital yesterday after a prolonged illness. He had been living at 2101 Connecticut Avenue since his retirement in 1937.

He had continued as a member of the company's consulting staff and had become widely known here through his counsel on national defense problems concerning hydro-electric power. Mr. Rickey, a graduate of Rensselaer Institute, joined the company in 1907 as chief engineer, serving in that capacity until his retirement.

New Concerts Await Result Of Drive Here

Plans for the National Symphony Orchestra's Watergate concerts and the following winter season are under way predicated upon the continued willingness of the Washington public to contribute $115,000 considered the minimum for a "satisfactory program," Milton W. King, general campaign chairman, said yesterday.

After an informal report meeting at the Statler Hotel yesterday, it was announced that but 70 per cent of the campaign goal have been reached thus far. Although not blindly optimistic, drive officials were confident that the remaining $35,000 can be raised if people realize that "they don't have to be ashamed to give little" and that small contributions in sufficient numbers will carry the campaign over the top.

Financial wizards yesterday pointed to the fact that the National Symphony Orchestra does not ask for more money this year than they did in preceding years although labor and other costs have risen considerably. The orchestra is ready to give Washington its Watergate concerts—the most outstanding recreational activity of the Capital in the summer—the children's and youth concerts and the regular musical programs in Constitution Hall and will meet increased costs by tightening up the budget rather than by asking for higher contributions.

Campaign committee chairmen will meet tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. at the Statler Hotel to give the latest report on the progress of the campaign which started April 1 and was supposed to be over last Thursday. At that time, Mr. King stated that it would be carried on "until every nickle needed for the orchestra is collected."

Headquarters yesterday expressed hope that the goal will be reached this week and the meeting planned for next Monday at the Statler Hotel will receive the final report.

Jeffers, Davis Clash Over OWI Rubber Report

By Martha Kearney
International News Service Staff Writer

Rubber Director William M. Jeffers last night assailed the recent rubber report of the Office of War Information as stale, confusing and none of the OWI's business.

But his words were no sooner out than OWI Director Elmer Davis challenged him with the charge that Jeffers had vainly attempted to suppress the statement.

Davis declared his determination to "continue to tell the people the truth whether Mr. Jeffers likes it or not."

"Executive Order 9182 established this office (OWI), 'in recognition of the right of the American people to be truthfully informed,'" Davis said.

"It did not say 'truthfully informed' about everything but rubber."

Jeffers had contended that direction of the rubber program was his business and the OWI should keep its hand off any publicity relating to it.

Certified as Correct

Davis asserted that the facts in OWI's rubber report, which Jeffers assailed as destroying the people's confidence in the rubber program, were certified as correct by Jeffers' own office.

"On Friday, after the story which his office had approved had been distributed for newspaper release, Mr. Jeffers endeavored to persuade our office to suppress it.

"He was repeatedly asked to point out any factual statement in this story which he believed to be incorrect and was assured that if he could show it was wrong, it would be corrected. He refused to do so, saying that he was too busy to read the story again and that we had no right to say anything about rubber anyway, that he would do all the talking about rubber."

Earlier, Jeffers had said:

"I'm responsible for the rubber program and ought to be the spokesman for it, not some specialist in Mr. Davis' office who doesn't know anything about it," he said.

"OWI made observations with which I don't agree. The report further confuses the public and very definitely destroys the people's confidence in the rubber program.

Suspicion Created

"It has created suspicion among the people to make them wonder whether some of the statements I have been making have been accurate."

The OWI statement which hinted at more restrictions to accomplish a further reduction of annual mileage per automobile, turned Jeffers grim.

"The OWI is not talking for me," he said tersely. "If any further restrictions are made they will come from me and I need no advice from the OWI."

He said that he was not so perturbed about the degree of motorist cooperation which had been forthcoming during the past year as the OWI apparently was in citing a national failure to cut driving to the 5000-mile limit fixed by the Baruch Committee.

"I do not think that the OWI need worry about the motorists," was his reaction. He is personally satisfied with their response to the driving limitations imposed upon them.

Court Upholds OPA Ruling Against Station

An Office of Price Administration order enjoining a local gasoline station from operating for 15 days because of selling gas without first obtaining the necessary ration coupons was upheld yesterday by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue in District Court.

Described by OPA as the first case of its kind to be decided in the courts here, Hubert H. Patterson and Robert J. Boyle, cooperators of the station, were charged with selling 2052 gallons of gasoline without obtaining the ration coupons.

The defendants claimed that the shortage charged against them was the result of vaporization and the normal losses incurred while handling the commodity. The station is located at 6503 Georgia Avenue Northwest.

Terming the violations "carelessness and negligence," Justice O'Donoghue said the defendants were as guilty of the violations "as though their violations were deliberate."

The original OPA enjoining order was for a 30-day period which was contested by the defendants and later the Federal agency agreed to reduce the period to 15 days.

Warrants Ready

Room License Enforcement Starts Today

Warrants will be served within the next few days on persons operating a rooming, boarding, or apartment house in the District without a license, it was disclosed yesterday when Maj. Edward J. Kelly, police superintendent, met with license officers from all 13 precincts and other officials at police headquarters.

This move was classified as part of the current campaign to close all such houses not complying with District fire regulations, which grew out of recent boarding-house holocausts.

Fire Escapes Required

License officers were instructed to determine which houses in their precincts were operating without a license, to take their addresses to Edward W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel, and to swear out warrants for prosecution. Thomas yesterday promised that these warrants would get prompt attention.

The license officers were asked to investigate first those operators who show their receipt of a deposit on a license. This receipt does not take the place of a license, Thomas emphasized, and these people will be ordered to appear in his office.

It was pointed out that the new fire regulation law passed by Congress in December provides that three-story houses, or houses 30 or more feet in height, other than private dwellings, in which there are five or more persons taken in for profit, must have fire escapes. Apartment houses of three stories, or 30 or more feet in height, in which there are at least three suites used for profit, must also have fire escapes.

Inspections Ordered

The assistant corporation counsel added that although the warrants will be sworn out under the new regulations on persons whose applications were disapproved under old regulations it is hardly likely that, if the same conditions exist, the applications would now be approved since the new law is more stringent.

To get the new program under way, the license officers will select one or two houses in their precincts which they are confident are violating regulations and to have a representative of the fire marshal's office go with them to inspect the edifice. The fire marshal's office has already agreed to furnish the necessary inspectors.

2 Indicted in Theft of 1200 Pairs of Hosiery

Two men were indicted yesterday in District Court on charges growing out of the theft of 1200 pairs of nylon and silk hose allegedly stolen from the Mayfair Department store, 3100 block Fourteenth Street Northwest, where one of them was employed.

Pervis Cogdell, 22, Negro, 1300 block S Street Northwest, the employe was indicted for grand larceny in the theft of the stockings and James F. Tisdall, 49, Negro, 1700 block V Street Northwest, was charged with receiving stolen property.

OPA Brightens Food Outlook

By International News Service

Office of Price Administration officials last night declared that the Agriculture Department's lowered estimates of this year's food production would not result in a reduction of current rationing allotments.

One official explained that present rationing quotas were based on the lowered food estimates which were only made public yesterday.

"Therefore, the curtailed per capita quotas of food for 1943 will not mean a comparable cut in the allotment of these commodities under our rationing system," they declared.

However, OPA officials said, in workin gout point values next month, they are expected to make some alteration on the basis of this month's experience.

Bony meats are expected to have lower point values, while it is anticipated that hamburger point values may be boosted.

Others indicted yesterday were: Housebreaking and larceny—Stanley Jones. Receiving stolen property—Artie Payne. Illegal use of an automobile—George F. Young, Emma J. Shamblin, Louis J. Young, Warren Lee Rucker, James West, Edward Wallace, Jr., Richard Brown, Richard Burgess, Leon S. Sollers, William H. Bullock, Lawler Taylor, George N. Washington. Grand larceny—George N. Iowan Indicates President Plans No 4th-Term Race

Frank Comfort, Democratic National Committeeman from Iowa, said yesterday he understood President Roosevelt "has advised friends privately that he will not under any circumstances consider a fourth term."

"If that's the case," Comfort told a reporter, "there might be some fellows who are trying to push him in against his wish. As far as I am concerned I think that if the war is still going on the President is the logical man to keep in office."

Wilson Still Leading Drive For 99 Jeeps

As the drive to present at least 99 jeeps to the Army closed officially last night, Washington school children bought enough war bonds and stamps to send the campaign more than 250 per cent over the District quota.

Final figures were not available yesterday since the majority of participating schools have not yet reported sales, while still others have obtained extensions of time beyond the April 19 (minute may day) closing date. The campaign opened March 1.

Available reports indicated that Woodrow Wilson High School is still leader in local jeep sales. When the campaign closed yesterday, the school had contributed funds sufficient to buy 24 2/3 jeeps. Under the supervision of Katherine Struve, English teacher, Wilson students have purchased bonds and stamps for a total of about $38,000 in the current year.

Sales of $19,844.65, equivalent of 22 jeeps, was reported by the Barnard Elementary School, which has an enrollment of only 468. Among the single contributions by pupils yesterday were one for $500 and one for $3750. The Barnard School will hold a jeep demonstration at 12 noon on Thursday, when parents of three former students, who have been killed in action, will be present. The program will honor the three youths: Lieut. Julius P. Lewis, Ensign Donald Augusterfer and Naval Aviation Cadet Elmer Mantz.

Ceremonies Tomorrow

Although they entered the campaign only a week ago, Roosevelt High School students have already purchased enough bonds and stamps for 15 jeeps. At this school, as at others which entered recently, the drive will continue through the week.

The Blow-Webb Elementary Schools, which entered the campaign jointly, expect to hold presentation ceremonies tomorrow. From an enrollment of 550 pupils they have collected enough for five jeeps.

More complete figures will be released by the Board of Education at a later date.

Another jeep drive was opened on Palm Sunday by the Victory Commission of Dunbarton College, which aims at purchase of 25 jeeps by May 17. More than $7000 worth of bonds and stamps have already been sold. The drive will close with a May Festival, at which "Miss Dunbarton" will be crowned. The title winner will be chosen through purchase of 10-cent defense stamps.

I discovered an amazing way to New STRENGTH.. ...better LOOKS!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach

2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

THESE two important steps may help you to overcome
Sour Stomach Jerky Nerves
Loss of Appetite Underweight
Digestive Complaints Weakness
Poor Complexion

Getting value out of the food you eat is your No. 1 health problem whether you eat 500 or 2,000 pounds yearly.

To do this, scientists say, you must have an adequate supply of natural stomach digestive juices and rich, red-blood must be present.

Improper diet, overwork, undue worries, colds, the flu or other illness often impairs the stomach's digestive functions and reduces the red-blood strength.

A person who is operating on only a 70 to 75% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.

Undigested food sours, causes gas . . . bloating . . . fails to supply the necessary body energy . . . tissue repair . . . often resulting in nervousness and loss of energy.

So with ample stomach digestive juices PLUS rich, red-blood you should enjoy that sense of well being which denotes physical fitness . . . mental alertness!

If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection, SSS Tonic may be just what you need as it is especially designed to promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach and to build-up blood strength when deficient.

These two important results enable you to enjoy the food you do eat . . . to make use of it as Nature intended. Thus you may get new vitality . . . pep . . . become animated . . . more attractive!

Also hundreds of others, members of the Anglo-American Committee for a Jewish Army

TO THE GENTLEMEN AT BERMUDA★ . . .

"On the field of battle soldiers die . . . on the field of massacre civilization dies!"

That's why the massacre of European Jews must be stopped NOW

LAST week, in Constitution Hall, a Mass Memorial for the two million murdered Jewish children, women an dmen of Europe was attended by Diplomatic Envoys of forty nations, by members of the United States Supreme Court, by members of the Cabinet, by hundreds of Senators and Representatives, and many hundreds of other leading government officials.

The memorial service, "We Will Never Die," written by Ben Hecht and organized by this Committee, unveiled before the eyes of our government not only the ruthlessness of the German's slaughter of an innocent People, but also Democracy's guilt —the guilt of indifference.

At the close of the service, Official Washington listened to these words spoken by two of America's greatest actors, Paul Muni and Edward G. Robinson:

"Was it the Germans alone?" . . .

"Other people have been villainously slain by the Germans in the effort to reform them, subjugate them, silence them or frighten them. The Germans have no such program for the Jews. They desire neither their reform, nor subjugation. They desire only their extermination. Death to all Jews is their cry!

"Who thus condemned the Jews? Who thus robbed an honorable people not only of life but of their fair name? Was it the Germans alone? It was the German who spoke and killed. But there are other ways of passing sentence than by speech and deed. There is the way of silence. As much by the silence of the world as by the howl of the German posse has the Jew been condemned.

"We are more than a nation at war, more than an arsenal, more than a battle line. Above and beyond the valor of our working and fighting millions, America is a dream of justice, a light held aloft to the sacred ways of humanity. We have brave soldiers who are fighting to victory. But the massacre of the unarmed civilians is beyond the reach of their guns. The desert and the Mediterranean are their battle front and they are honorably engaged on it. The massacre of Europe is our battle front—and we are not honorably engaged on it."

"We Do Not Use Our Weapons" . . .

"In the historic halls of this city many great deeds and dreams have been forged. We ask that the silence of these halls be broken again. We ask for a second front against the crime of Europe, not a military front of soldiers, tanks and planes. But a second front of the human spirit against massacre.

"Our valiant soldiers are using to the last ounce of their power the weapons given them. But we who hold the weapons of morality—the cry of wrath and outrage, the words of righteousness which more than armies have made the shape of the world—we do not use our weapons. We betray our victories by not winning them in the name of the decencies for which they are fought. The dead and dying who litter the steps of civilization had only one cry—Remember us. Speak for us, they said, before you become too guilty in your silence even to mourn us. Speak for us and give not only the Jews, but give mankind back its fair name."

On the completion of the service, Edwin C. Johnson, United States Senator from Colorado, and National Chairman of the the Committee for a Jewish Army of Stateless and Palestinian Jews, addressed the audience. This, in part, is what he said:

"They CAN Be Saved!" . . .

"We must save the five million remaining Jews who stand out first on the murder docket of the Nazis bookkeepers! They can be saved. It is a hard task, but not harder—indeed it is a great deal easier—than many another task humanity has faced and conquered.

"The problem itself is basically simple. Many Jewish men, women and children can be saved merely by opening the doors of their hell-trap. The satellite nations of Hitler are willing and ready to release these people now, if only someone will accept them."

"It Is Sinful to Keep the Gates Closed" . . .

"And so long as the United Nations are not offering more practical and more immediate places of refuge, it is sinful to keep the gates of Palestine closed to them. There is little point in debating changes in our immigration laws. There is no time to arrange with reluctant, far-off countries to take in these desperately beset people, when Palestine, but a stone's throw from the slaughter pens of Central Europe, is pleading for the privilege of accepting them.

"Then, too, there are other Jews—stateless and disinherited but who have made their escape from Europe—who ask only the right to fight Hitler as Free Jews side by side with other Free Nationals. They ask the right to die as soldiers—not as victims.

"Until they be given the right to die usefully and bravely, as Jews on the field of battle, the world will continue to look upon them as victims to be pitied, not a people to be honored."

"The Dual Tragedies . . ."

"The dual tragedies—the Jews of Europe victims of brutality and the Jews of Palestine victims of politics—demand an immediate and adequate humanitarian answer. These dual tragedies have brought a new and natural grouping of a down-trodden people into a new national entity.

"This natural grouping—yea, this new nation must be deemed by us a fellow-nation of the family of nations, entitled to all rights and dignity accorded other peoples. We must recognize it as a fellow-belligerent in our common war for survival.

"We have no more to say to the good hearts and great minds who have honored us with their presence here tonight. We leave the matter in their hands. May Almighty God guide us in righteous action!"

★ GENTLEMEN AT BERMUDA:

You, who meet today as delegates from Great Britain and the United States, to discuss the "refugee" problem of Europe — remember this:

The hope of salvation for millions of European Jews, now being tortured and agonized, is in your hands.

The fair name of democracy and the sincerity of the Four Freedoms, hang upon your deliberations and decisions.

Remember this as you sit in Bermuda.

Every day, every hour, in which you deliberate dooms living children, women and men to helpless death in Europe. ACTION is called for. ACTION—not pity. ACTION—not "exploratory" words. As you will talk, people will die because you have not yet come to ACTION.

The action can be . . . must be . . . simple and swift. It is encompassed in the following program, which asks only the will to save the European Jews, to be successful.

THE PROGRAM OF ACTION (. . . not pity!)

There can be no real ACTION until a practical MACHINERY FOR ACTION is set up by the United Nations. Thus the first concrete step to be taken is . . .

The immediate creation of a United Nations Agency, of military and diplomatic experts, with full authority to determine and effectuate a realistic and stern policy of action, to save the remaining millions of Jewish people who are marked for cold-blooded slaughter by Hitler.

There are two broad areas in which this Agency can immediately begin to operate:

1. Immediate utilization of all existing possibilities of transfer of Jews from German-dominated countries to Palestine or to any temporary refuge; and the initiation of all further possibilities in this program.

2. The immediate creation of a Jewish Army of Stateless and Palestinian Jews, including "Suicide" Commando Squads which will raid deep into Germany, and Air Squadrons for retaliatory bombing.

Rommel May Save Only One-Tenth of Corps

BIG question mark about Rommel is—will he be able to evacuate his forces from Tunisia?

Here is the answer given by War Department top-flight experts:

Rommel has a great concentration of antiaircraft artillery in the northern corner of Tunisia to which he has withdrawn. This includes not only his own stuff but also the artillery of Gen. von Arnim's units. He will be able to put up a blanket of antiaircraft fire so intense that Allied air attacks will be costly.

In addition, the Germans will try to bring an air umbrella from Italy to cover Rommel's evacuation. This is the same strategy adopted by the British for the evacuation from Dunkerque, when they withdrew their planes from the Continent, repaired, refueled, then whipped back across the Channel, cleared the skies and kept an umbrella over the British forces until the evacuation was accomplished.

But, foreseeing this, Allied planes already are strafing Sicilian airfields and knocking out Axis planes on the ground to prevent the air umbrella from ever unfolding.

Also Rommel must begin partial evacuation at once, regardless of whether he tries to hold Tunis and Bizerte. He has so many men in that small area that they get in their own way. This partial evacuation can be accomplished under cover of night, across the short waist of the Mediterranean, between Tunis and Sicily.

But to evacuate his entire force of nearly 200,000 is regarded impossible. The judgment of War Department experts is that he will deliver safely about one-tenth of his men, or 20,000. The rest—a force of 180,000—will be killed or captured, in a catastrophe of such magnitude that Tunis and Bizerte will come to rank alongside of Sevastopol and Stalingrad.

But because of Rommel's terrific antiair strength, the losses will not be on one side alone.

Secretaries of the Navy

NORTH CAROLINA'S able Congressman Graham Barden is not only an expert on naval affairs, but has a sense of humor. Once he sent Secretary of the Navy Knox a clipping from the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer, published by former Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels.

The clipping contained a picture of Knox and Secretary of War Stimson with the caption "Ambassador and Mrs. Litvinoff." Under another picture of the Russian Ambassador and his wife were the names of Knox and Stimson.

Congressman Barden facetiously sugested that Secretary Knox should take this up with his predecessor, former Secretary of the Navy Daniels

Knox, a newspaper publisher himself, played it straightface. He replied in a very formal letter that Josephus Daniels doubtless had made a typographical error and meant no harm.

Rationing the Zoo

CONFRONTED with the food shortage, National Zoo Director Bill Mann is trying to fool the monkeys. Bananas are scarce, so Dr. Mann has devised a paste made of sweet potatoes, white potatoes and a little honey—all mixed up together—which he passes off as a substitute for bananas.

The soft-bill birds take to it all right, but the monkeys look at him with one eye shut as they eat, indicating they know what tricks he is up to.

The meat problem is not as bad as you might suppose, for the lions have been getting horse meat instead of beef for a long time—ever since the price of beef began to rise several years ago. What's more, horse meat comes closer to the lion's natural diet of zebra.

Like any housewife, Dr. Mann is driven to resourcefulness. What to do about those ant eggs he used to get from Germany and Japan? The birds loved them, and some of his fancy creatures have the most eclectic tastes.

Well, Dr. Mann has turned to the Good Neighbor policy, and is importing a substitute delicacy in the form of dried Mexican flies. Since the days of the Aztecs, the folk below the Rio Grande have been supping up a certain type of water bug (philopods) which scamper in great numbers across the lakes of Mexico.

They are caught in nets, made into a paste (it looks like pate de foie gras) and served without seasoning.

Note: Peanut-tossing visitors do not solve the feeding problem. Says Dr. Mann, "It's just as unhealthy for the monkey to eat continually between meals as it is for the little boy who feeds the monkey."

Doctors for Farmers

Current attacks on Farm Security Administration threaten to undo one of the most effective programs of the New Deal. If Congress succeeds in stripping FSA of funds, there will be an end of the medical care program, which has brought "group health" to 117,000 families in the lower income classes of the country.

At first, this program was bucked by the American Medical Association which worried about "socialized medicine." But after six years a recent report of the conservative medical association views the experiment with favor.

Reason for the change is that State medical associations, in the proportion of about 4 to 1, decleared that the group health program did not destroy the independence of doctors, but actually gave them more business.

The Farm Security medical plan is a "prepayment plan," under which families in farm areas pay a fixed fee for a full year's medical care for the entire family, regardless of what ailments may develop. The fee ranges from $15 in the poorer areas, upward to $40.

But the farm bloc, now running wild in Congress, probably will sweep aside this aid to rural communities, though it now operates in 1140 counties.

MANY OF YOU out there on the fighting fronts once worked side by side with us here at United Air Lines. It's hard for us to visualize what your lives must be like today. For we, like so many millions of Americans, have no enemy hurling bombs and shells at us to remind us that his goal is our total destruction.

For that reason, perhaps it has taken us longer to realize the full meaning of all-out war. Perhaps we've let food rationing, and taxes, and the number of miles we can drive our cars become overly important to us.

And perhaps reading the accounts of bitter sea, air and land battles has made some of us on the home front think of our own jobs as insignificant — unimportant in a world at war.

But deep in our hearts, we who are responsible for the transport by air of vital war personnel and materials realize that we can meet our obligation to you only by giving our jobs the best that's in us.

We cannot all shoot down Zeros. We cannot all sink U-boats. We cannot all blast Nazi pillboxes to powder.

But unless we work harder and better today than yesterday, we delay your return home. And when you do come back to your job here at United, we must be able to look you squarely in the eye in the honest knowledge that we have carried our full share of this war's burden.

Realizing the urgent need for every ounce of energy and courage we can muster, we of United volunteer this pledge!

Equivalent To Bombs

If Washington had been bombed and had some fifty blocks of residential property destroyed, the Government would doubtless raise heaven and earth to get the victims rehoused. Congress would certainly appropriate all the funds necessary. Priorities would be forthcoming at top speed. Well, the fact is that the houses on approximately 50 blocks in Washington have been razed in recent years and the people thus put out on the street are desperate for places to live. The destruction did not come from bombs out of the skies, but from Government agencies lifting the face of the Capital.

Most of the improvements thus made were not only commendable but also necessary. That, however, is beside the point so far as the ousting of the poor from their homes is concerned. The Washington Housing Association estimates that 20,000 families have been forced out of their homes by public improvements here, the greater part of that displacement occurring in the last five years. To offset this loss the Alley Dwelling Authority has housed 1711 families. But the ADA was long ago forced to abandon this work and devote its entire energy to the housing of immigrant warworkers in temporary quarters. Indeed, three of the ADA's projects containing 1471 family units designed for Washingtonians of low income were set aside for incoming warworkers. That leaves permanent residents of low-incomes, even though they may be doing war work, in a very serious predicament. Houses built by private industry and such public projects as McLean Gardens are beyond reach of these people.

A survey recently completed through the cooperation of 11 civic agencies clearly shows the results of failure to rehouse families that are turned out by either wreckers or bombs. "In every section of the city," the report says, "one can point to certain houses and say, 'A year ago a single family lived in that five-room house and paid $20 rent. Now there is a family living in each room and as much as $90 a month in rent is collected from them. No improvements have been made.'" Filth, rats, quick deterioration of the house, insanitary conditions, disease, crime, immorality and the break-up of homes follow in the wake of this overcrowding. No community can be indifferent to such disastrous encroachments upon its civilized way of living.

A strong movement is under way to secure an appropriation of five million dollars which the ADA could use to rehouse these victims of Washington's wartime and prewar transformation. The ADA already has authority to undertake such a program. It needs only funds, materials and a restoration of the privilege of using its own receipts from rents in the development of new projects. Moreover, the ADA has already demonstrated that housing can be provided for low-income families without cost to the taxpayer. And it appears to be the sort of a program which John Ihlder, executive director of the ADA, proposes to resume. Congress cannot remain deaf to this appeal without virtually inviting an epidemic to invade the nerve center of fighting America.

Military Control

Theoretically control of the Nation's war production program is lodged in a civilian agency, the War Production Board; actually it is exercised by the Army. Such a situation is a perversion of the original directive. In creating WPB the President gave a plain mandate and unmistakable authority to Donald Nelson to direct America's productive energies and resources, yet the real authority has slipped progressively into military hands. Not long ago, when Mr. Nelson ousted Ferdinand Eberstadt and placed Charles E. Wilson in charge of the agency's activities, there seemed reason to hope that the military encroachment had been arrested, and that civilians would manage what is essentially a civilian job. At the time such a hope was expressed in these columns, but it is now evident that the hope has been disappointed. This is evident from the demotion of the one element within WPB which has firmly and consistently opposed this military dictation, namely the Planning Committee.

The Planning Committee is composed of men who, in the early days of American rearmament, pleaded for the abandonment of "business-as usual" and the raising of production goals. But when these goals were lifted to levels which could not fail to produce crippling shortages in other phases of the production program, they urged a scaling down to reasonable and realistic proportions. Against the Army's reckless expenditure of essential materials to build new plant facilities, they sought conversion and utilization of existing plants. They tried to introduce system into the scheduling of orders, so that needed weapons would not be held up unfinished because of a critical shortage of one or two component parts. In short, they wanted production to be planned. It is evidently for this work that the Planning Committee is being reduced in status. Its members, smarting under this treatment, have submitted their resignations to Mr. Nelson. What he does with them will be, in a real sense, a test of his willingness to assert some measure of independence of the Army. For, if he relinquishes his Planning Committee, WPB will be brought completely under military domination. It is not yet too late for Donald Nelson to become what the President intended him to be—the director of America's war production program.

Admiral Robert

Admiral Robert, high commissioner for Martinique and Guadeloupe, is evidently another of these ironists of whom French literature has afforded so many examples. At any rate, his letter to Mr. Joseph E. Dynan of the Associated Press is worded with great politeness and consummate cleverness. The Admiral is as well aware as anyone of the incongruities and anomalies of our French policy, and he takes full advantage of them in explaining why he and the forces under his jurisdiction have not joined the rest of the French Empire in repudiating Vichy.

Admiral Robert, it will be recalled, is in control of several remnants of the French fleet, including a large aircraft carrier, a cruiser and several precious tankers, which at this point would be highly useful to the Allied cause. Before the North African invasion the proximity of these ships to the North and South American mainlands gave rise to some uneasiness, and negotiations to "neutralize" them were being conducted between the Admiral and the State Department. The official indignation over the Free French seizure of St. Pierre and Miquelon at Christmas, 1941, was prompted by a fear that the negotiations had on that account been jeopardized. However, nothing came of the negotiations in the end, anyway, and we have been forced to resort to cruder forms of persuasion, such as the blockading of food supplies. Cut off from direct communication with Vichy, the Admiral's position has been changed by circumstances from that of a quasi-independent satrap to one of temporary autonomy.

Now the Admiral says that there are two conditions under which he would be willing to join with his compatriots throughout the empire. One of these would be the knowledge that such a decision would not constitute "rebellion against the French government." Whom does the Admiral now recognize as the French government? Vichy? He is very careful not to say so and equally careful to point out that his commission and authority were given him by the Third Republic. But he also knows that there is now no political organism which can be called either a de facto or de jure French government; none which the United States itself can recognize as such. Instead, Admiral Robert points out, there are two factions, "one dominated by Britain and the other by the American Government."

This assertion that the deadlock between the Fighting French and the faction of General Giraud merely reflects the political rivalries of Britain and America is one of the staples of Axis propaganda. As M. Andre Visson has recently shown on this page, it is utterly false. But it acquires a certain verisimilitude from all the contradictions and confusions of our policy, including our relations with Admiral Robert. Elsewhere Admiral Robert says that "the manner in which the French who believe that the moment had come to join the United Nations have been treated by the Allies only confirms me in my prudence." It is not probable that the Admiral is here alluding to the treatment of the Fighting French by the Department of State. He may or may not be alluding to the popular demands in Britain and America for the removal of Vichy influence from the government of North Africa. But since neither official British or official American pronouncements on France have been distinguished by crystal clarity, we have no right to expect great clarity from Admiral Robert, and he knows it

The Admiral, however, does want the two French factions now at war with Germany to "form a unity under one single authority vested with sovereign rights." Such sovereignty would, of course, obviate all question of "rebellion against the French government." Whence, however, could this sovereignty be derived? Obviously, the source of sovereignty would be the French people. This is a point raised by the de Gaullists in their insistence that representatives of metropolitan France be included in any provisional government or in any body in which French authority may be temporarily vested.

But now, to confuse matters more than ever, comes the statement of General Giraud opposing any provisional government until Metz has been recaptured, that is to say, until the enemy has totally been expelled from French soil. General Giraud evidently believes that a sovereign government in France is impossible until the French people are wholly free to elect it, and this on its face seems logical enough. But if General Giraud is right, then Admiral Robert, by his own special logic, is justified in sitting tight until the victory is nearly complete, and there is no longer any doubt of the direction in which the French political winds are blowing. But by then, of course, his warships would no longer be needed.

Bermuda Parley

One would have to be an optimist of a particularly unrealistic brand to expect any truly constructive achievements to emerge from the Anglo-American conference on the refugee problem which opened at Bermuda yesterday. It certainly does not augur well for the success of that parley that its site was deliberately chosen to make it as inaccessible as possible to outside influences and the pressure of public opinion, that representatives of refuge-seeking groups have been excluded, and that labors of the conference have been stated to be "primarily exploratory."

Primarily exploratory! This ten years after Hitler began his campaign of racial and religious discrimination which has since been transformed into as bloody and brutal a campaign of extermination as the world has ever witnessed! This several years after the Evian conference, attended by the representatives of many nations, including the two exclusively represented at Bermuda, explored the refugee problem in all its aspects.

In the meantime the refugee problem has become fantastically more complex and more difficult but also more urgent. Hitler's mass executioners will not wait while the delegates at Bermuda carry on their exploratory consultations, arrange for committees and subcommittees, pile up mountains of statistics and do nothing. And since we and Great Britain have taken the lead this time, a heavy obligation rests on both countries to do more than talk about this problem.

Upon the British rests the onus of having, as a result of the stupid White Paper policy, prevented a large number of refugees from getting to the one nearby place where they would have been welcome and where they were needed. But the responsibility upon the United States and the other members of the United Nations is no less great. In existing circumstances it is obvious that only a percentage of those marked as victims of Hitler can be rescued. But if we fail to rescue those that can yet be saved, we shall have betrayed our obligations and been faithless to the ideals for which we are fighting.

Hail to Baseball

When we want a simile to suggest that something is thoroughly American, it is common practice to call it as American as baseball. There is a popular notion that we inherited the game from the Indians who preceded us on this continent. But Webster's New International Dictionary states flatly that baseball is a sport derived from "rounders, a game originally and chiefly English." Cricket, the variation of rounders, into which the English so lamentably fell, is therefore a second cousin of the great American pastime.

It is possible that Englishmen will mend their ways. Last Sunday afternoon, according to a report from London, more than 2000 Britons stayed to the very end of a softball game played between two American Army teams. The sport has shown a remarkable susceptibility to export. Even in Japan it was played very widely and, in fact, rather well, until the military rulers decided that its democratic nature might promote dangerous thoughts.

They were probably quite right. For the point about baseball is not that it is peculiarly American, but that it is essentially and indestructibly democratic. No other game calls for, or at any rate receives, such fervent emotional participation or so much intellectual guidance and counsel from the galleries. It is a stimulant to free speech. If the differences of opinion it engenders are sometimes sharp, they are rarely rancorous. Perhaps because it is played in the warm and golden days of the year, baseball evokes in the crowds that press together to watch it a live sense of kinship and community.

Big league baseball, which gets under way in Washington today and elsewhere tomorrow, will be played this year by married men with children. Many of the brightest names of recent years will be absent from the box scores. But it is well that a new season is to commence and that the continuity of the game is to be preserved. If baseball can afford a little respite from the work and worry of our daily lives, it will make a real and useful contribution to the winning of the war.

SEA-COAST VILLAGE

The cold sea pales to sleep,
The winds arise
To blow the stars up steep
And wintry skies
The shafts of beacons sweep
The sky and sea;
The lights of small homes keep
My love for me—
Love of all wandering hope
In all men's hearts
That leans against the slope
Of night, that marks
The coldest stars with mind
Level and free,
And knows, though lost and blind,
That it shall see.

What is A Colony?

A Belgian View

WHAT IS a colony? According to a widespread popular belief a colony is a distant territory exploited by the mother country, according to the habits of ruthless capitalism and with complete disregard for the natives' welfare and lives. Recent utterances by American statesmen have somewhat confirmed public belief in this deprecatory concept of the term "colony." A sequence to this sentiment is the conviction that all colonial peoples are oppressed and, therefore, should be liberated.

Among the empire nations is Belgium. It has a colony in Central Africa about 80 times its own size, with a population of 14 million colored people, which is six million more than there are white inhabitants in the home country. Is this vast domain exploited and should its inhabitants be liberated from the Belgian yoke"?

Beginning Always Harsh

There is no doubt that the debuts of all colonial enterprises have been harsh on the colonized people. The closer the range of culture of the invaded countries was to that of the invaders, the fiercer was the resistance and the more brutal the methods of subjugation. Colonial conquest, with a few exceptions, has nearly always resulted in partial and sometimes even complete extermination of the conquered peoples. Initially, colonization is a violent procedure. Nobody among the people of good will and Christian morals wants to excuse this fact, but history is there to prove that it is practically a rule.

The Congo populations before the Belgians came were decimated not only through the continual warfare in which they indulged on a general scale, but above all by the regular incursions the Arab slave merchants made throughout the country. For three years, from 1891 to 1894, the Belgians waged a difficult and heroic war against these traders.

Tropical diseases and primitive hygiene accounted for a death rate recalling that of the darkest periods of the Middle Ages, when sometimes 50 to 75 per cent of the inhabitants of certain regions of Europe died of epidemics. It is the pride of Belgium that sanitary conditions and medical aid in the Congo are better than anywhere else in Africa; that, for instance, in 1938, five million Negroes were examined by our health services, accounting for nearly half of the colored population. The Foreami (Queen Elizabeth Foundation for Medical Aid for Natives), endowed by private and public funds, is entrusted with the building of hospitals, dispensaries and subsequently necessary roads. When an area has been cleared and made habitable, the state takes over and carries on at a moderate expense, not overburdened with the costs of the basic organization. More than 10 per cent of the colony's budget is devoted to medical services.

In a country as well acquainted with the problems which arise between people of different color as the Uniteed States, it is superfluous to say that the relations between white and colored people in the Congo have been carefully planned. It has been Belgium's policy to respect, as much as feasible, native institutions—the elementary forms of government which most villages possess. These villages are administered through the chiefs and native leaders in accordance with their tribal customs. Justice is administered by their own civil courts which are run by the natives under white surveillance. In the cities and big industrial centers where Negroes from many different tribes live together, individual tribal customs can no longer be followed. Central governing bodies have therefore, been formed in these cities, composed of Negro officials designated by the colorful population.

Natives Not Exploited

Are Belgian Negroes exploited? The Charter of the Congo Colony decrees "that no one can be forced to work for private individuals or for companies." The law on native labor is a ponderous volume which eliminates all chances the individuals or companies could have to evade the clauses of the charter. The only form of forced labor existing is the compulsion of every male Negro to either pay a modest tribute each year or work it off in a certain number of days, generally at state road work. The Belgians followed an old native custom that each man must work a certain number of days for his chief. It has been recognized by American experts that road-building was a high point in Belgian colonization, resulting in "roads whose engineering feats and upkeep make those of Kenya and Tanganyika look like cowpaths."

Out of a native population of 14 million only 420,000 Negroes are engaged as wage-earners, a low percentage. They have the problems every wage-earner has all over the world. They have even additional ones, due to their frequent homesickness and the need of adapting themselves to new surroundings, but it is a far cry from depicting these people as victims of a brutal capitalistic exploitation, who must be freed at once.

Colonies are often thought of as closed countries, the private hunting grounds of the white men of the homeland. The very basis of the Congo's political system prevents this colony from being closed. It is one of the few countries in the world which is open on an equal basis to traders of all nationalities. Out of 9204 economic undertakings only 4227 are in Belgian hands.

One Day's Targets

By Barnet Nover

Stepping Up The Air Offensive

PILSEN, Ludwigshafen, Mannheim, Bremen, Tilsit, Koenigsberg, Danzig, Caen, Abbeville, Le Touquet, St. Omer, Zeebrugge, Oudna, Palermo—these were just one day's targets in the round-the-clock Allied air offensive against the Axis.

The specific objectives included the great Skoda works which, next to Krupp's is Hitler's largest producer of armaments; a factory manufacturing Focke-Wulfs; a cluster of highly important chemical plants; enemy airfields, power plants, railroad yards, harbor works, submarine nests, supply depots and shipping.

Men of many nationalities—Britons, Americans, Russians, Canadians, New Zealanders, among them—participated in the raids which were carried out by four Allied air forces—the R. A. F., the United States Eighth Air Force, the Russian Air Force and the Northwest African Air Forces.

IT IS EVIDENT from the geographical spread of Saturday's targets that there are not many parts of occupied Europe which are still beyond the scope of Allied air power.

This fact has a two-fold importance. In the first place, it tends to offset the Nazi efforts to disperse war production, to concentrate as much of it as possible at points which, in the past, have been untouched by Allied bombs. In the second place, it forces a dispersal over a very wide area of the Luftwaffe's diminishing fighter strength.

In fact, Saturday s raids made it clear that the Luftwaffe is incapable of defending all parts of Occupied Europe with equal force.

The Skoda plant and the Focke-Wulf factory at Bremen appear to have been heavily defended both by great numbers of fighter planes and large concentrations of antiaircraft. The size of the defending Nazi air force at Bremen, for instance, can be gauged by the circumstance that an estimated 50 enemy fighters were shot down in combat.

At Palermo, on the other hand, the enemy's fighter strength was conspicuous by its near absence, reliance being placed almost entirely on antiaircraft.

SATURDAY'S raids reflect the growing numerical strength, the expanding range and the mounting power of the Allied air fleets. Were it possible to duplicate Saturday's performance day after day over a period of several months the collapse of the Axis would be brought measurably nearer.

As it is vast damage is undoubtedly being done to Axis war production, transportation and morale by the bombings. But that damage does not yet appear to have reached decisive dimensions. And it is doubtful whether Allied power has already reached the point where Saturday's losses could be duplicated over any considerable period of time without a serious loss of strength.

IN THE RAID on the Skoda works the R. A. F. lost 37 four-motored bombers. An additional 18 Lancasters and Halifaxes were lost in the raids on Ludwigshafen and Mannheim. And 16 American heavy bombers were shot down in the attack on Bremen. Russian losses in the raid on Koenigsberg, Tilsit and Danzig amounted to three aircraft.

In addition, three Allied fighter planes were lost in the raids on Caen, Zeebrugge and other enemy-held points in Western Europe, while eight Allied planes were reported as missing in combat in and around Tunisia.

IN VIEW OF the tremendous importance of some of the targets and the damage presumably inflicted on them—this is particulary true of the Skoda works, the Ludwigshafen-Mannheim chemical plants and the Focke-Wulf factory at Bremen—our losses can hardly be said to have been excessive.

Yet daily raids of such dimensions, if they involved equally great losses, would mean a monthly destruction of well over 2000 four-engined bombers. Later we may be able to afford such losses and the loss of highly trained personnel that goes with them. It is doubtful whether we can afford them yet.

A continuous Allied assault on such relatively remote and heavily defended points as Pilsen will thus only be possible after our air power has been expanded far beyond its present level and probably not until we have acquired bases much closer to Pilsen than any now available to the Allies.

IN THE MEANTIME, however, Allied air power is making itself felt both in the matter of bombing of enemy industrial areas and in such strategic theaters as North Africa and its surrounding waters and islands.

According to Lieut. Gen. Carl Spatz his Northwest African Air Forces have secured "supremacy of the air" over Tunisia. Since the battle of the Mareth Line began on March 20, 519 Axis planes have been shot down against a loss of 175 Allied aircraft.

Given this Allied air supremacy, any possibility of a large-scale Axis Dunkerque can be ruled out. By the same token it is even doubtful whether the now Axis garrison in Tunisia will be able to hold out as long as did the surrounded Axis garrison at Stalingrad. The destruction of a large part of an Axis transport fleet carrying supplies to Von Arnim and Rommel yesterday shows how tenuous the Sicilian-Tunisian supply line has become. The final Allied victory in Tunisia is probably not far off. And when it comes, a new chapter in the Allied air offensive will be ushered in.

"Res Adjudicata"

The recent refusal of the Supreme Court to review the decision of the Maryland Court of Appeals in the case of Wood et al. vs. Tawes, comptroller, is a severe and stunning defeat for the constitutionality of individual and State rights in this country of the first order.

The idea of permitting one State to exercise a virtual monopoly in the assessment of income taxes against all Federal employes temporarily residing in such State who are, in fact, acknowledged and bona fide citizens of other States, is a matter which may be judicially understood by the Supreme Tribunal, but it is certainly not understood by the employes, themselves, nor by a majority of the States from which these persons were appointed to the service of the Federal Government.

Since all of the States contribute through their citizens a proportionate share of the tax monies paid into the Federal Treasury from which the salaries of Federal employes are disbursed, they should, by all conceivable tests of equity and logic, enjoy the equal privilege of taxing all of such persons who are their citizens without being compelled, as they, in effect, will go to forego this right in favor of the assumed and unwarranted tax prerogatives of one or two of the States.

Nothing will be gained, however, by discussing the plain and inescapable truths and facts with which the numerous individual cases involved in this litigation are surounded, but it is a hundred-to-one shot that whenever the States whose independent taxing privileges are being so flagrantly and inequitably invaded in this manner eventually wake-up to the situation, it may be that their somewhat over-taxed and somnambulant representatives in Congress will then be moved to pass a law affecting this frightfully "chaotic" question of State taxation of Federal employes which the Supreme Court, having an enlarged and proprietary view of the matter, will not be able to by-pass or invalidate. JOSIAH WITHERS.

Expired Tags

Included in a broadcast from the Traffic Court yesterday was the case of a Maryland woman who drove her car within the District, without having on her registration tags the clips showing payment of the 1943 registration, in consequence of which she was given a summons and had to spend a morning in our Traffic Court. She presented evidence that she had made application for the 1943 registration in ample time, but delivery was long delayed, and the judge very properly dismissed the case.

The only thing which makes this case worthy of note is the fact that our police should have picked upon a driver whose registration was delinquent only since March 31, 1943, when there are innumerable Maryland cars on our streets which bear tags expired on March 31, 1942. There are also plenty of Virginia cars on our streets with expired tags, some of them having expired a year ago. C. L. CHAPIN.

Free Press

May I commend your energetic efforts in behalf of freedom of thought and speech. We should fight strenuously against the closed door policy which threatens the Food Conference of May 18. If we are to feed the world for some years, every citizen must be enlisted in the effort, either as producer, or in the conservation of products. How can the housewife, asked to eat only inferior cuts of meat, have total faith in authorities who make this request, if these authorities have no faith in her intelligence or cooperation? If they treat her as Goebbels treats the inferior races—handing down decrees.

Did President Wilson once speak of "open covenants openly arrived at"—or am I thinking of a happier era, when there was—or will be—real democracy, even among the State Department potentates? S. M. S.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

What a Difference!

("What weighs upon us is the fact that we have not the means of preventing such cruelties. We must simply admit that the war has taken a turn into atrocity that we had not foreseen."—Nazi newspaper in commenting on the Allied air raids.)

What weighs upon us heavily—
And weighs and weighs and weighs—
Is that a race that hands it out
So very often pays;
Oh, how it hurts us Nazis bold
Who blasted towns in pride
When we are called upon to face
A turning of the tide!

II

Such cruelties as we endure
Make any Nazi boil;
They aren't quite as pleasant as
When done on foreign soil!
This brutal warfare from the air
Now makes us fume and cuss;
(A bomb looks, oh, so different
When falling down on us!)

III

The ruthless battering of towns—
The homes aflame at night—
These fill us with a feeling that Such warfare isn't right;
How can a nation do such things
In this enlightened day
To us who never had a thought
The tide could turn that way?

IV

Our foe is base and inhuman—
He's blasting us to bits;
He's even sinking to the depths
Of putting on a "blitz"!
He even seeks to terrorize
The humble and the meek;
(That any foe could stoop as low Leaves us too shocked to speak.)

V

Imagine such degrading acts . . .
Great fleets of bombing planes
Come blasting homes and city streets
And even water mains!
They sometimes hit the innocent—
They oft raze buildings flat . . .
(We Nazis cannot understand Such ruthlessness as that!)

VI

You ask us, "What of English towns
And Polish towns, and Dutch?
Of London, Plymouth, Rotterdam
and Warsaw, Hull and such?
No decent foe would bring that up
And hurl it in our face;
To do so shows our enemy
Lacks decency and grace.

L'Envoi

Oh, how it weighs and weighs and weighs
Upon the Nazi mind
To see that modern war can take
A turn that's so unkind!
We must admit that when we dished
It out the Nazi way
It hadn't been foreseen we'd have
To take it, too, some day!

"Desert Victory" is a great war picture, but we marvel at the mental workings of the mind that decided it would be a good thing to put a childish animated cartoon, a bow and arrow short and (believe it or not!) a tedious boost for a jazz orchestra leader on the same program.

"The Broadway mind," says Elmer Twitchell, "would probably film the entire battle of Guadalcanal and precede it with a Mickey Mouse, a bathing beauty short and a little reel showing the home life of a barroom quartet.

New York's Eclipse

A New Yorker challenges your editorial on "The Decline of New York." Washington needs more than even world political importance to eclipse New York as the world's greatest city. Washington reminds me of the Grand Central Station. Millions of people flow in and out, but when the rush hour is over, it is nothing but a great empty shell. Washington is like that; millions come, but few remain.

New York was built up by a population which had its roots there. A native Washingtonian is as rare as an "Apartment for Rent" sign. For that reason civic pride is unknown here. It was civic pride that made people tolerate "oppressive taxation" and "too many regulations." Taxation built the finest subway and transportation system in the world, the finest public schools, hospitals, parks, playgrounds, sewers, streets and highways. "Too many regulations" drove speculators in slum properties and sweat shop operators out of the city. What we thereby lost in taxes we gained in public health and happiness. What the Hanes committee report describes as "blighted areas," which have been condemned by "too many regulations" as unfit for human habitation, are apparently considered good enough in Washington to house hundreds of thousands of Government workers.

It is local civic pride and not world political prestige, Mr. Editor, which makes any city great. When Washington has grown from within, big enough to support two, instead of one, legitimate theaters, it will then have taken only the first step toward eclipsing New York. Until then, Washington will remain what it is, a super-Grand Central Station.

NEW YORKER.

Curfew Plan

We are hearing quite a lot about juvenile delinquency. Under OCD setup are auxiliary police. Most of these men have had special training but after training have no jobs to keep them busy.

To keep up their interest and to relieve a situation which is serious, why not have towns enact a curfew law. Then let these men patrol in groups of two or three and take into custody any underage person.

This would clear these children from the streets and put a little more responsibility on parents.

I. The Problem Of Germany

WHILE there is general conviction that Germany must be disarmed, there is no known and agreed program for achieving this end. The fact that the United Nations do not as yet have a program is an immense advantage to the men who rule Germany.

LIPPMANN

It gives them a hedged bet on the future: heads they might win, tails they will not really lose. To convince the Germans to fight on to the bitter end, they are able to say that (a) the coalition may still fall apart and let them win a substantial victory, and (b) that the Allies mean to exterminate or enslave the German nation if it does not fight to the bitter end, and (c) that since the Allies are not agreed on a plan, a German Talleyrand will be able in the postwar era to play off the Allies against one another, and thus form some kind of new combination within which the German imperial and military power can be reconstituted.

THEY cannot but be confirmed in this view by seeing that what goes by the name of postwar discussion is almost entirely focused upon the differences among the Allies; how little attention is given to the fundamental problem of what to do with Germany. They hear us arguing about the boundaries and the intentions of Russia, about the constitution of the nations that are to be liberated, about India, about China, about the colonial empires. But except that we shall demand an "unconditional surrender," they see us avoiding the subject of Germany.

We do avoid it, and the reason we avoid it is that it is a hard problem, in regard to which there exist few clear ideas, but many strong but conflicting emotions.

YET WE must think about it, and we must think out loud about it. For the problem is too big and too complicated to be solved without a meeting of many minds. We cannot suppose that a few officials in the foreign offices will alone and in secret work out a plan which can be put into effect when hostilities cease. Any plan will require popular support, not merely in one but in many nations, and if there is no crystallization of opinion in advance it is more likely that the plan will precipitate controversies than that it will be put into effect.

Moreover, the reluctance of responsible officials to take the public into their confidence until they have perfected their own plans and are ready to unveil them on the day of action is, however understandable, unwise. They will find that separate and divergent schools of opinion will have formed among the United Nations and within them, that statesmen and groups of men will have committed themselves to views which, out of interest or pride of opinion or personal vanity, they will not willingly surrender. Granted then that officials have not yet made up their own minds on this subject, and find it difficult to do so, it will still be advisable for them to take wide circles of laymen into their confidence in order that their ideas may grow up into common views.

THIS IS feasible because there are certain axioms which must control all serious thinking about the German problem.

The first is that the German nation is not going to be exterminated. Nor, though German frontiers may be altered, will Germany be partitioned or dismembered.

The second is that the sins of the fathers will not and cannot be visited upon the children, and, therefore, punishment must be exacted quickly by those who have suffered from those who have sinned.

The third is that a satisfactory German policy must go further than an armed alliance and collective security to suppress or defeat a renewal of German aggressiveness. It must be designed to cure the German will to commit aggression. Therefore, the policy must establish a police force; and it must deprive Germans of the means to recreate their military power; and it must provide a dominant majority of the German people with a vested interest of their own in liquidating German militarism. In short, Germany has to be policed, disarmed and reeducated, or more accurately, reoriented.

The fourth axiom of our thinking must be, I believe, the recognition that the postwar period, during which Germany is in effect under military government, cannot last longer than 15 years and ought probably not be longer than 7 or 8. We must fix the limitation in our minds and be clear that, as time goes on, as the problems of domestic reconstruction absorb men's attention, as affairs in other parts of the world have to be dealt with, a system which is more normal than military government must come into effect for the control of Germany over a somewhat longer period of time.

A system, which is not military government, has to rest upon economic incentives. It has to provide a means of controlling the sources of German military power. It has to provide incentives to the United Nations to remain interested in continuing that control. It has to provide incentives to the German masses which will, as time goes on, cause them to benefit by the permanent liquidation of German militarism.

IT IS within these moral and practical limits that we have, I believe, to approach the German problem. We can come to grips with it by defining what we mean by the disarmament of Germany.

Supreme Court Action Upholds Reduction In Light-Bulb Price

The Supreme Court yesterday dismissed an appeal from a decision which declined to direct the General Electric Co. of Schnectady, N. Y., and the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. of Bloomfield, N. J., to abolish a 23 per cent reduction in the retail price of the 40, 50 and 60-watt incandescent lamps.

Seeking reinstatement of the higher prices, the Jewel Incandescent Lamp Co., Inc., of East Newark, N. J., contended the reduction was ordered "for the obvious purpose of driving the independent lamp manufacturers out of business and for the ultimate purpose of subjecting the public, for years to come, to arbitrarily fixed high prices which thus would become possible by the complete elimination of all competition."

Statute Upheld

The Supreme Court ruled that a statute prohibiting anyone from impersonating a Federal officer, with intent to defraud, applies to those who "have, by artifice and deceit, sought to cause the deceived person to follow some course he would not have pursued but for the deceitful conduct."

Justice Black delivered the 7-to-1 opinion, which reversed the action of the Federal District Court at St. Louis in dismissing an indictment charging two men with impersonating FBI agents.

In seeking a Supreme Court review, the Justice Department asserted that the District Court's ruling "would permit wholesale impersonating of Federal officers."

Black said "the statute covers the acquisition of information by impersonation although the information may be wholly valueless to its giver."

In another 7-to-1 decision by Justice Rutledge, the court ruled that a shipowner is liable for wages and "both maintenance and cure" to a seaman who leaves a vessel on authorized shore leave and is injured "while traversing the only available route between the moored shop and a public street."

"Shore leave is an elemental necessity in the sailing of ships, a part of the business as old as the art, not merely a personal diversion," Rutledge said in an opinion which gave two seamen the right to maintain suits against their employers.

Among other actions the court:

Agreed to review an Interstate Commerce Commission order approving a proposed merger of what were described as the principal motor carriers operating along the Atlantic seaboard into the largest common carrier of property by motor vehicle in the United States." This description was given by the counsel for the Agriculture Department, the Farm Bureau Federation and McLean Trucking Co., Inc., of Fayetteville, N. C., in urging the review. A three-judge Federal court in New York upheld the ICC order.

Review Refused

Refused to review a decision holding that provisions of the 1938 Civil Aeronautics Act, requiring a Federal certificate of airworthiness, may constitutionally be applied to an airplane flight entirely within one State.

Agreed to review a decision enjoining striking conductors, engineers and firemen from committing acts of violence against the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroad following a dispute over wages and working conditions. An injunction granted January 3, 1942 by the Federal District Court at Quincy, Ill., was sustained by the Federal Circuit Court at Chicago.

Agreed to review a decision by a three-judge Federal court in New Jersey holding that it lacked jurisdiction to enjoin enforcement of the Emergency Price Control Act.

Affirmed a decision holding constitutional a provision of the Pennsylvania Corporate Net Income Tax Act applying to the allocation of wages and salaries and gross receipts.

Refused to review a decision approving a plan for the reorganization of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Co. worked out by the ICC.

Granted a stay of execution for Henry Daniels, jr., and Curtis Robinson, Negroes convicted of raping a white woman at Mobile, Ala., and sentenced to die on April 23.

Road To Dictatorship

WAR MANPOWER Chief McNutt has at last established himself as a little congress for the enactment of manpower legislation. His order of last week forbidding men in numerous industries to improve their status by shifting to higher-paid jobs, unless they get the consent of the WMC, leaves no doubt as to the power that he has gathered into his hands. For this order is backed up by threats of a year in prison for those who disobey the Manpower Chief.

PUSEY

The millions of workers and employers whose rights are thus curtailed by Mr. McNutt's latest law will doubtless ask, first of all, how he gets that way. He started out very humbly just a year ago. At that time he became the head of a week-kneed agency set up for the purpose of working out a national manpower policy and suggesting legislation necessary to put that policy into effect. Months passed and there was no sign that any comprehensive manpower policy had been formulated. Of course, we have no way of knowing what recommendations were sent to the White House in this period. President Roosevelt has recently bottled up the manpower report of the Byrnes Committee. Maybe Mr. McNutt's early proposals met the same fate. In any event, the problem of putting the right man in the right place merely subsided into deeper chaos throughout last summer and fall.

What we do know is that the President became very dissatisfied with the showing that Mr. McNutt had made during his first six months as head of the WMC. He tried to induce Secretary of the Interior Ickes to rescue the WMC from the confusion and futility into which it was subsiding. Mr. Ickes talked himself out of the assignment. So the President decided to boost Mr. McNutt to the status of a manpower czar and give him another chance.

THERE followed the drastic order of December 5, placing the Selective Service System under the WMC and giving the chairman power to control all hiring and recruitment of workers essential to the war effort. Mr. McNutt then moved rapidly to consolidate his power. He once expressed the belief that a national service act would be necessary to achieve the most effective use of our brawn and brains. Presumably the White House frowned upon the idea. In any event, Mr. McNutt proceeded to set up what he called a "voluntary program." Critical areas were designated and mobilization plans for each were worked out with the cooperation of management and labor.

Then in February hiring controls were invoked. A policy statement made it clear that men in labor shortage areas would no longer be free to move from job to job. Hiring would have to be done through the United States Employment Service or other agencies designated by Mr. McNutt. Men in essential industries could be rehired only if they could get a "statement of availability" from the WMC. This was to be enforced by cracking down on employers who hired men without the approval of the McNutt agency. In other words, workers had to comply with WMC orders or be thrown out of their jobs with no chance of getting other work in war industries in the congested areas.

Soon, moreover, the powers of the Selective Service Act were borrowed by Mr. McNutt as another means of enforcing his "voluntary" system. Men of draft age in nonessential industries were informed that they would no longer be deferred, regardless of how many dependents they might have, unless they shifted over to work connected with the war. Congress had said that men between 18 and 45 could be drafted to fight for their country. But "fight" in the law became "work or fight" in enforcement.

BY ANOTHER executive decree—this time straight from the White House—the Wage-Hour Act was made to mean the reverse of what it meant when it was enacted. It had been passed to spread the work, at a time of much unemployment, by penalizing employers for keeping men on the job more than 40 hours a week. Instead of requesting suspension of the law, the President proclaimed a 48-hour week and gave Mr. McNutt power to lengthen or shorten working hours, beyond that figure. This order stands in spite of the fact that it makes the original law an absurdity and smashes a great gap in the line against inflation which the Administration is trying to hold.

Now comes, as a climax to this build-up of powers, the McNutt order forbidding warworkers and many others to change their jobs to get better salaries. The significant fact about this order is that Mr. McNutt has again borrowed penalties from an act that has nothing to do with the control of manpower as such. "The hiring by an employer of a new employe," says this order, "or the acceptance by an individual of new employment, in violation of this regulation, is subject to the penal provisions of the act of October 2, 1942." But that act contains no penalties for hiring. The inescapable truth is that Congress has passed no legislation for the control of manpower and the Administration has asked for none.

Having built himself a flimsy house of cards, Mr. McNutt is now trying to buttress it by grabbing penalties from laws passed to control inflation and build up the Army. That is an act of desperation. It follows the pattern that all dictators have used. Apparently the theory is that if legislative power is grabbed a little at a time it will not be noticed. But if such controls over the lives of the people can be made effective by executive decree without any legislative backing, then our democratic system is already in the process of cracking up. And that is bigger news than any defeat we have suffered or victory we have won to date on the fighting fronts.

Delano Board May Get Fund

By the Associated Press

The National Resources Planning Board, headed by President Roosevelt's uncle, Frederic A. Delano, may get a new lease on life through an Administration-backed compromise reported to have majority support within the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Operations of the agency, threatened with extinction by House action in cutting off its funds, face attack in the Senate from opponents of its "cradle to grave" social security proposals, but Administration lieutenants said they hoped to win approval of a sufficient appropriation to keep its planning activities alive.

The Budget Bureau originally approved a $1,400,000 appropriation for the new fiscal year, beginning July 1, but the House committee eliminated the entire amount and a floor move to restore $415,000 was rejected after Representative Taber (Republican), New York, charged the work of the board was "absolutely useless."

There was some indication also that funds for another executive agency, the Budget Bureau, might be increased by the Senate group. The House cut $180,000 from the bureau's requests.

Food Rations Shrink in Europe

By Edwin D. Gritz

New information received by the Office of War Information from overseas sources indicates that food rationing in occupied Europe is now a grim joke.

The Nazis have so despoiled the continent, as well as North Africa, that very little food is available for rationing purposes—despite theoretically foolproof German rationing machinery. Yet rationing officially goes on.

The little food available for rationing, it was found, is computed in practically thimbleful amounts. One example, the meat ration in Poland is now 3¼ ounces per person per week, as contrasted with two to three pounds available a week to the American housewife.

Even such a ration, OWI learned, is dependent on whether any meat at all is available in some particular week or weeks. And when no meat is available, it's a safe bet that supplies have been diverted for the Wehrmacht or to groups important to the Nazis—be they Germans or others.

Throughout the great part of occupied Europe, milk in any form is so scarce that it either is not try, or is given only to children as skimmed milk.

The extent of food exactions by Germany was found to vary according to the severity of occupation measures taken against the civilian populations. While the French and Norwegians, for example, must suffer from malnutrition, the Poles, Greeks and Czechs face actual starvation.

Bread, a European "must" at all meals, is relatively plentiful. But compared to United Nations' standards, the amounts are pitifully small—Greeks are getting 14 ounces a week, Yugoslavia 20 ounces, Belgium 55, Czecho-Slovakia 62, Netherlands 63, Luxembourg 70, Denmark 62 and France 60.

Meat was found to be rationed, when available, as follows: Norway, 1 ounce occasionally; Belgium, 6 ounces a week; France, 6½; Luxembourg, 10½; Czecho-Slovakia, 10½, for the heavy worker; Netherlands, 4½; Yugoslavia, 5½.

Butter, almost a memory now in the minds of many Europeans, is supposed to be supplanted by other fats. But the amounts of the other fats run: Belgium, 3½ ounces a week; Czecho-Slovakia, 5½; Netherlands, 6½; Norway, 8; Yugoslavia, 3, when available; France, 2½; Luxembourg, 7½, and Denmark, 10½.

Refugee Conferees Stress Victory Need To End Problem

By Richard G. Massock

Associated Press Staff Writer

Hamilton, Bermuda, April 19.—Richard K. Law, British Undersecretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and Harold W. Dodds, chairman of the United States delegation to the British-American Refugee Conference, opened the two-nation meeting today by stressing the necessity of winning the war as the only final solution to the refugee problem.

Law warned the Nazi-persecuted peoples of Europe against "false or premature hopes of immediate succor" from the conference because of wartime exigencies.

However, both Law and Dodds declared that the group hoped to find a solution for the "'immense problem'" which could be presented to the United Nations for international action.

Pointing to an Allied victory as a necessity to final solution, Law declared:

"I believe the persecuted people themselves should understand this truth and that they should not be betrayed by false or premature hopes of what may be possible into the belief that aid is coming to them when in fact we are unable to give them immediate succor.

"We must take care," Law added, "to see that we are not betrayed by our feelings of humanity and compassion into courses of action which at best would postpone the day of liberation and at worst might make liberation forever impossible.

Dodds, president of Princeton University, and Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), New York, were the American delegates attending the opening session, Senator Scott W. Lucas (Democrat), Illinois, having been delayed in leaving Washington.

With Shirley Povich

Well, here it is. Another big-league baseball season opening today despite Pearl Harbor, the shooting on two fronts, the U-boat menace, stepped-up conscription and all of the manpower acts. Verily, it's a hardy game. And America seems to insist on it.

POVICH

A few months ago the game didn't seem to have a chance to survive the war effort. Lack of transportation threatened it. The work-or-fight order sounded like baseball's death knell. And then a terrific reaction set in. From overseas the soldiers said they wanted the game to go on. Governmental big shots began to understand baseball's value as a morale factor. Opposition to the game leveled off.

The game is with us again as a war package, denuded of ten of its big-shot stars, stripped of its luxurious travel accommodations and boiled down to a personnel comprised of married men with family responsibilities. The baseball bachelor is out for the duration. Like your ballplayer or not, this year he's somebody's husband.

The ball clubs have compromised with quality, to be sure. They know they're lucky to be able to put men on the field. There will be guys in big league uniforms this year as quick-job promotees from the minors and veterans called out of retirement, who couldn't bribe their way into the majors in a nonwar season. The standards of play will be lower, but there will be a pennant decided and some club will win it.

American League players have been going into the armed services at a rate of ten per month ever since Pearl Harbor. At this point there are 150 in Uncle Sam's uniforms. When it is considered that the league never owned more than 200 ball players in any one season, 150 defections are pretty significant of the vast turnover in talent to Uncle Sam.

Every team has been hurt by drafts and enlistments. It's tough to make out a case for any club in the American League as the pennant winner. It's easier to point out the flaws and weaknesses of all teams. As one bright young fellow declared, "the American League race looks like a whale of a scramble for last place."

The Yankees are supposed to win the pennant, but if they do it will be a sad commentary on the rest of the league, because the Yanks of 1943 no more resemble pennant-winning Yankee teams of yore than a Guadalcanal fox hole resembles the Mayflower lounge.

The Yanks took five straight lickings from the Dodgers in the exhibition games and weren't hitting a lick. Manager Joe McCarthy may need all his genius to get the club in a contending position, with Joe Gordon, Charley Keller and Bill Dickey the only remnants of his 1942 team except for his pitching staff.

The Boston Red Sox are simply shot. Any club that loses such as Ted Williams, Johnny Pesky, Dom DiMaggio and Lou Finney is not only weakened but perhaps ruined. In a normal year at this point, it would be easy to count out both the Red Sox and the Yankees. But not this season, because they'll be operating in a cheaper league.

St. Louis was shaping up very nicely for a vigorous thrust toward the pennant in a year when the league was weaker, but all of a sudden the roof caved in on the Browns when Uncle Sam began to beckon Vernon Stephens, their shortstop. Stephens made a first division club of the Browns last year. He hasn't departed for the Army yet, but he's not long for the Browns.

Cleveland got a body blow when they lost their first baseman, Les Fleming. The Indians' plight is pretty typical of most clubs. Their first baseman is Otto Denning, a reformed catcher, who scarcely hit .200 last year. But managers can't be too particular this season. The Indians don't have a reserve outfielder on their club.

Relatively, the Nats are beginning to look pretty important in the race. They finished seventh last year, but in a weaker league they would seem to move up automatically. The acquisition of Bob Johnson and Gerry Priddy makes the Nats look better than in 1942. They may be the only improved club in the league, and very tough to deal with indeed if they get pitching and Uncle Sam lays off some of the childless married men.

The Detroit Tigers are beginning to look just a bit formidable, too, and may emerge as one of the better clubs in the league, with much depending on the success of Rookie Dick Wakefield, slugging outfielder. The Tigers have pitching, but not much slug. The only clubs which look sort of hopeless, even in a cheaper league, are the White Sox and Athletics, who may outfumble each other for the cellar.

Dear Al:

John Manfuso has slipped one over on me. I see by the workouts that there's a colt here owned by the Washingtonian and of all names, the youngster is to be burdened with the tag "Art Brown." It didn't take me long to look him up and I find that the colt is by Aneroid out of the mare True Tune, both owned by Manfuso. I always liked True Tune and I predicted long ago that a colt by Aneroid out of that mare would be a good one. However, he now has the anchor on him in that Art Brown name. I don't see how Manfuso had the nerve to name him for that broken down organ player. Watt Elliott, owner and trainer, is beginning to believe in dreams. Yesterday morning he met Alan Clarke in front of the secretary's office and said, "I had a dream last night, Alan, that my mare Light Chatter had a foal at your farm—a chestnut colt with a blaze face." Clarke came back, "I don't see how you could have known because I just came over from the farm last night at 11 o'clock and the youngster has a blaze face and is a chestnut." I guess we can look for a 2-year-old in a couple years with the name of "True Dream" or something akin to that. Jockery (Miss) Judy Johnson is looking for steeplechase mounts. The father of Lieut. Charles F. Willis, jr., in whose honor yesterday's program was conducted, is employed in a Baltimore shipbuilding company and did not come to the track because he didn't want to be an absentee. Willis, a Baltimore boy and a Navy ace, was represented by his mother. See you on the rail.—Bill.

First race — CHESTED gets in light for this test maiden juveniles and may take the measure of NIBBLE. The latter showed a good effort here, but must carry 120 pounds. HIGH NORTH is reported to be a good one.

Second race—WILTON has speed and is not overly matched in this company. I'm going to string along. BILL'S SISTER and BALLOON to fill out the money bracket.

Third race—BOSTON VICTORY is the best suited of this gang and should like the off track. GOOD ANTE and CAB SIR have speed and will be ready to fight it out if the inside post anchors the top one.

Fourth race—LOVE O' MAUD may bounce out of the maiden ranks in this company. Needs only the right ride. GREY HOOD comes from a good barn. TENEBROSE for the show end.

Fifth race — HARD TELLING is cheap but has speed and may make the most of the outside post position. LIGHT TIDE is reported to be ready and is dangerous. HIS SHADOW for the show end.

Sixth race — ASK AUNT ADA has plenty of foot, as shown last out, and belongs on top of these. SOBRIQUET and INDIAN GIFT to take care of the place and show awards.

Seventh race——TACK ROOM was off sluggishly last out and closed enough ground to win two races. Looks like the day's best bet. STRATEGIC is better than that last.

Eighth race — IMPREGNABLE gets my call in the day's finale. WHITE HOT and NOSY should chase the top one home.

Entries to Close Friday for Keefer Cup Tourney

Mrs. Charles Tully, new tournament chairman of the District Women's Golf Association, will close entries Friday at noon at her home, 1421 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, District 3978, for next week's annual Keefer cup tournament.

The Keefer cup, opening tournament of the women's gold season scheduled next Tuesday and Wednesday at Chevy Chase Club, is limited to players in Class A, the scratch to 18 handicap group. The low 32 scorers and ties of the first day's play will qualify for the final 18 holes.

The field will undoubtedly be smaller than in past years due to transportation difficulties and the number of women golfers in war work but Mrs. Tully had 24 entries in hand last night and expects two or three times that number. Mrs. H. W. Bashore, of Kenwood, won the tournament last year.

Phillips And Collins Fight Draw

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

Jimmy Phillips, Cumberland's promising lightweight, and Pvt. Jimmy Collins, soldier boy out of Baltimore, scrambled eight rounds to a draw last night at Turner's Arena in the feature bout of the Soldiers' Equipment Fund card.

A meager crowd of 1138 paid $1,358 into the till, of which 10 per cent will be turned over to the fund which will be used to purchase boxing equipment for men of the armed forces in the camps. Inclement weather and the start of the Jewish Passover undoubtedly held down the attendance.

Phillips, a 5 to 6 underdog in the betting, was given the decision by Judge Frank Schuyler but Referee Charley Reynolds and Judge Dr. O. U. Singer had it exactly even. On The Post score sheet, Phillips showed a slight edge but the decision was well received.

A Honey of a Scrap

The fight itself was a honey, with Collins, winner of 25 consecutive bouts, showing the effects of a four-months layoff. He missed more than he connected at long range and was constantly kept off balance by the on-rushing tactics of "the spoiler" Phillips, who has whipped four straight local favorites. At in-fighting, Phillips showed a distinct edge and was constantly tying up Private Jimmy.

Both flashed nice left hands and it was plainly evident that Collins was the harder puncher. Twice in the fifth and again in the sixth he landed hard right hands that shook up Phillips, but the Cumberland boy rapidly shook them off and kept coming, refusing to permit Collins to get off first.

Neither slowed down throughout the route, going at top speed, all the way in a unique but good boxing exhibition for Turner's punchbowl.

Stoney Lewis Scores

Stoney Lewis, 164, You Street favorite, reversed last week's eight-round loss at the hands of Oakie Greer, 160, Baltimore, when he won a unanimous eight-round decision in the semifinal. Off to a bad start. Lewis came back strong to carry five of the last six rounds to win easily.

Rocky Luciano, 160, Harrisburg, won a close six-round decision over Joe Sole, 152, Fort Lee soldier. Luciano nearly had Sole out in the fourth, but the game soldier boy rallied and came back strong.

Sammy Lewis, 163, Washington Negro, knocked out Phil Wheatley, 158, Baltimore Negro, in 2:10 of the third round of a scheduled six with a stiff left hook to the stomach.

In the four-round opener, Frankie Maxwell, 134, Baltimore, made his pro debut with a decision over Jimmy Jericho, 131, local Negro, getting off the floor after a first-round knockdown to do so.

Ortiz Released By the Dodgers

Brooklyn, April 19 (AP).—Brooklyn released Outfielders Jack Graham and Roberto Ortiz on option to Montreal of the International League today. Graham was with Montreal last year. Ortiz was obtained from the Phils and spent last year with Washington and Chattanooga.

Hoya-Temple Game Off

Georgetown University's scheduled game with Temple was canceled yesterday due to the down pour and probably will not be played as the Owls conclude their season on April 30.

Vander Meer and McCormick May Be Drafted; Reds Mourn

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, April 19.—Uncle Sam pointed tentatively to two mainstays of the Cincinnati Reds today: Double no-hit Johnny Vander Meer and Outfielder Mike McCormick.

Vandy was reclassified 1-A by his Selective Service Board in Ridgewood, N. J., and Mike took his Army screen test tonight before a Cincinnati board. Both indicated they expected to be inducted within 30 days.

"Oh, oh!" groaned Traveling Secretary Gabe Paul when first advised of the action on Vander Meer. Then, echoing a consistent policy of his club, "To do nothing that will interfere with the winning of this war," he added, "but there isn't a thing we can do about it, I guess."

Vander Meer, sturdy portsider who hurled two successive no-hit shutouts in 1938, and no stranger to the ocean, expressed a "personal preference for the Navy, if that's possible."

"If it isn't, that's ok too. I'll give Uncle Sam the best that's in me," he told newsmen.

He received news of his reclassification as the team awaited a subsequently cancelled departure for Richmond, Ind., for a game with St. Paul.

"Hi, Buddy," quipped McCormick from a nearby chair.

"Hi, Buddy, yourself" replied Vandy, and saluted smartly.

Two other members of the Reds' team are on Uncle Sam's preferred list at the moment: Bert Haas, third baseman who, married, is the father of a child born since Pearl Harbor, and Dick West, second-string catcher. West has no children.

Vander Meer is the father of a baby born at Christmas-time.

3 High School Ball Games Set for Today

A trio of interhigh baseball games will feature this afternoon, the high-prep sports card. According to Hardy Pearce, director of interhigh athletics, however, the frays will not be played unless the diamonds dry up enough to play on.

Games booked for today in the series: Woodrow Wilson playing its traditional rival Western, on the latter's field; Central visiting Eastern; and Coolidge invading Anacostia. All games are listed for 4 o'clock except the first which will begin at 3:45. Other games on the docket today are: Charlotte Hall at St. Alban's; Bethesda-Chevy Chase at Landon; and Montgomery Blair at Georgetown Prep, all commencing at 4.

If the diamonds do dry up enough for today's games the Central-Eastern meeting shapes up as the best. Both the Vikings and Ramblers boast one-sided victories over Anacostia and have showed indications of having power-house teams. Joe Tucker, the Central mainstay, probably will be on the hill for the invaders, while his opponent will be either Clint Speiser or Dave Leonarduzzi, the latter being credited with a four-hit shutout over Anacostia.

Stu Brown is expected to get the call for Wilson and either Dee Lampros, Nathan Gould or Randy Fones to hurl for the Raiders. Both the Tigers and Raiders need a win to remain in the title race as both dropped their opening series frays to Tech, present series leader. Bob Holzerblein will go for Coolidge against Harry Swisher for the Indians.

TODAY'S CARD

*Wilson at Western.

Braves Win With 5-Run Rally in Tenth

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 19.—A five-run rally in the tenth inning enabled the Boston Braves to gain an even break in their city series with the Red Sox today as they took a 6-1 decision from the Yawkeymen before a Patriot's Day crowd estimated at 2000 fans.

The second game of the scheduled twin bill was called off because of weather in the third inning with no score at that point.

Norman Brown contributed heavily to his own downfall in the tenth inning of the opener when he issued four walks and threw wild in an effort to trap a runner. An error by Tommy McBride in left field and a base knock by Johnny McCarthy also aided in the five run splurge.

Charley Workman and Chet Ross of the winning team were credited with the only extra base hits, each contributing a double.

Crosetti Signs

New York, April 19 (AP).—The New York Yankees announced tonight that Frank Crosetti, their veteran infielder, had agreed to terms and would leave his San Francisco home some time this week.

Crosetti is under suspension by Commissioner Landis for pushing Umpire Bill Summers in the final game of the World Series and will not be eligible to play until May 21, so that his belated signing has had no effect on the Yankees' preparations for the start of the season.

His signing, and that of Ernie Lombardi, the Boston Braves catcher and National League batting champion, reduced the ranks of holdouts on the eve of the major league season to Outfielder Lou Novikoff of the Chicago Cubs.

Count Fleet Is Shipped To Downs

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, April 19.—Count Fleet nibbled a lump of sugar today, took a walk around the barn to show there was nothing wrong with him that a bucket of oats wouldn't cure, and then got on a train for Louisville and a little matter of a $75,000 bank roll.

Before loading him on the choochoo for the Kentucky Derby May 1, Trainer Don Cameron gave the Hertz hurricane the 10-minute walk to test the left hind foot which was gashed during his winning waltz in the Wood Memorial at Jamaica last Saturday. And except for the heavy sulfa-drug pack and bandage, the foot was no different in performance or appearance than any of the Count's other feet—and he has the usual four.

As the high-headed horse ambled slowly around the stable's indoor ring without the slightest trace of soreness or stiffness, and with the injury showing no signs of the dread infection that was feared, Trainer Don let out a long sigh of relief. It ended the 48-hour vigil he had kept since the mishap occurred in a scramble at the starting gate for the Wood.

He's been watching the colt since then like an "A" cardholder watches a pint of gas.

On the train with Mrs. John D. Hertz's whiz-bang was another Derby candidate, Blue Swords, the hope of Allen Simmons of Akron. He finished second in the Wood, after leading until the Count made up his mind to turn loose his stuff.

Trainer Cameron didn't make up his mind definitely about giving the Count his ticket on today's train until mid-morning, after changing the dressing on the rapid Gee-Gee's left hind foot.

The Count, however, will do no racing at the Downs before the Derby, but will have a workout or two after the foot heals up.

Ladies' Night Card Matches Krauser, Cox

Ladies' night wrestling will be introduced at Uline Arena tonight at 8:30 o'clock when the Liberty Athletic Club features a two-out-of-three-fall engagement involving Max Krauser, handsome claimant of the European heavyweight championship, and Crasher Joe Cox, the Kansas City whirlwind.

Beginning tonight the Liberty Club will adopt a policy whereby ladies—with or without escorts—will be admitted to its matches upon payment of a nominal 25-cent service charge.

The semifinal finds Abe Coleman, mighty midget of the mat, bringing his celebrated kangaroo kick into play against Michele Leone, the ill-tempered New England destroyer and fan baiter.

Supporting 30-minute events pair off Milo Steinborn vs. Ed (Tarzan) White, former University of Alabama football star, and John Swenski vs. Jim Austeri, who square off in the show opener.

McNutt, Sen. Barkley Figure in Ceremonies

Dutch Leonard and Luman Harris Hurl; Veteran and Rookie Managers Oppose

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The Nation's Capital, focal point of a thousand war activities, today embraces leadership in another form, less grim—the opening of the 1943 major league baseball season.

At Griffith Stadium the Nats and Philadelphia Athletics will launch the new American League campaign and on the promise of clear, if cool, weather, 25,000 fans of high and low station will furlough themselves for an afternoon at the ball park.

The ceremonial opening-pitch is to be tossed from the presidential box at the stadium by the boss of a prime war agency, Paul V. McNutt, chief of the Manpower Commission whose decrees have stripped the big leagues of much of their talent.

Mr. McNutt will fling the playball pitch at 3 o'clock, following traditional on-the-field ceremonies in which Senator Alben Barkley, American League President Will Harridge, President Clark Griffith of the Nats and Lanier McLachlen, president of the Board of Trade will lead the flag-raising parade to center field.

All Open Tomorrow.

Baseball will be entering its second war year, with the Nats and Athletics' lineups typical of the war-riddled rosters of the two big leagues. The inaugural game in Washington today will be followed by a broadside on the baseball front tomorrow when opening games in eight other big league cities are scheduled.

In the dugouts of the two clubs will be baseball's version of a May-and-December managerial struggle, with Rookie Manager Ossie Bluege of the Nats, sending his team against the club of 80-year-old Connie Mack, oldest pilot in organized baseball.

Bluege and Mack will be thrusting their best pitching arms forward with Bluege having named knuckle-balling Dutch Leonard as his starting pitcher and Mack relying on his No. 1 righthander, Luman Harris.

The gathering may be served up a duel of knuckle balls, in as much as Harris, like Leonard, has cultivated the dipsy-doodle pitch. Primarily, however, Harris is a fastballer.

Nats Choice Today

The Nats will be heavily favored to win today in their battle with the club that finished in the league cellar last season. The Washington team was no better than seventh last year, but in the intervening months has gained respect as a first-division contender.

Bluege will be putting on the field a team that has won 9 of its 11 exhibition games this season, and which has been buttressed by the addition of two key players—Gerry Priddy, second baseman obtained from the Yankees, and Outfielder Bob Johnson, from the Athletics.

Johnson, who spent all of his career in the majors with the Athletics before being traded to Washington, thus will be playing against the club with which he put in 11 years. Famed for his slugging ability, Johnson has been assigned the clean-up role on the Nats.

This is the Washington club which Bluege and Owner Clark Griffith patiently put together during the winter, a club which may boast the league's strongest outfield in the presence of Johnson and George Case and Stan Spence, the latter pair the only remaining outfielders in the league who hit .300 last season.

Big Leonard, who sat out most of the 1942 season because of a leg-break suffered in April, today will be making his third attempt to win an opening game for the Nats. He was beaten, 1-0, by the Red Sox in 1940, and 3-0 by the Yankees in 1941.

The Nats will be attempting to break an opening-game losing streak that has extended for four seasons.

Jake Early, the club's regular catcher last season, again will be behind the plate to handle Leonard's knckle ball. Early, a batting flop last year, has led the Nats' hitting in the exhibition games.

Bluege will be presenting an almost completely revamped infield. Mickey Vernon, a fixture at first base, remains at that post, but Priddy has taken over the second-base job. Johnny Sullivan will be playing shortstop with a half-year's experience under his belt, and Ellis Clary, a converted second baseman, has been moved to third by Bluege.

With the Athletics will be two former Nats, playing the outfield for Connie Mack. Johnny Welaj, fleet but light hitting right fielder will start today but Bobby Estalella, the stocky Cuban, has been a disappointment in training camp and in his place in leftfield will be Jim Tyack, 30-year-old rookie who has never seen a big league game.

Mack has attempted to bolster his team with the purchase of two Pacific Coast stars, Outfielder Jo-Jo White, who formerly served with the Tigers, and Third-Baseman Eddie Mayo, once with the Braves.

Danny Scocca Boots Two Winners Through Mud at Pimlico

The Midway Purse Won By Pharien

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., April 19.—Danny Scocca, a Washington boy who quit Eastern High School to become a knight of the saddle, rode his fourth winner of the budding meeting here today and picked the featured Midway Purse as the spot. Scocca, who made four trips to the hospital last year and whose life was feared for twice, also rode Lost and Found, a $20.10 shot, to victory in the eighth race.

He put up a heady ride aboard Pharien, the property of Mrs. Ray Feinberg of Chester, Pa., to bring the 4-year-old filly home two lengths in advance of Allessandro owned by Mrs. Donald Woodward of Washington, and four lengths in front of Spoon Bread, owned by Mrs. Veader Leonard of Baltimore.

7000 Turn Out

Despite racing conditions at their worst, 7000 customers reported and the majority had wagers on the chances of Pharien and the Capital City jockey. The combination returned a $4.70 mutuel and stepped or splashed the mile and a sixteenth in 1:53 3-5.

Only five horses faced Starter Jim Milton. At the break, Jimson Belle forged to the front under hustling tactics by Jockey Buddy Root. Scocca, however, refused to be lured into a display of speed at this time nad rated Pharien along in second position.

Leaving the backstretch, Jimson Belle began to fade and Scocca clucked to Pharien and the filly took command. Allessandro and Spoon Bread, restrained early, then made moves on the outside and when the former appeared dangerous in the early stretch run, Scocca went to the whip. Pharien got the signal and increased her stride to be drawing away at the end.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROUGE DRAGON, $7.60, $4.70, $2.60; ALCADALE, $8.80, $4.30; STROLLING ON, $2.50.
ROUGE DRAGON went to front at once, set good pace while steadied at fences, responded when placed to drive and held ALCADALE safe in final stages. ALCADALE was close to pace from start, moved up boldly approaching fourteenth fence, made bad landing and was tiring at end. STROLLING ON was sluggish early and failed to reach contention at any stages.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1100. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 12:32. Off at 12:32. Winner, Mrs. Chester A. Lyon's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE TIMMIE, $5.50, $3.50, $2.50; STEEL BEAM, $5.00, $3.20; STOLEN TRYST, $3.00.
WISE TIMMIE, much the best, came around horses to gain contention, wore down leaders to take command and was under restraint while drawing away at end. STEEL BEAM was rushed to STOLEN TRYST'S pace early, was hard used and tired. STOLEN TRYST forged to front early, was hustled while racing with STEEL BEAM and was stopping through final quarter.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 2:01½. Off at 2:02. Winner, A. Vilone's b. g. (6) by Halcyon—Transit. Trained by E. Hixon. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:15⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALHALON, $8.40, $4.50, $3.50; SUNSET BOY, $4.00, $3.30; DOCTOR'S NURSE, $9.90.
ALHALON went to front in opening quarter, shook off MISS GOSLING to open long lead and held sway easily thereafter. SUNSET BOY was off slowly, responded when placed to drive to move up menacingly and then hung in final eighth. DOCTOR'S NURSE was off alertly and showed good effort.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1100. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:31¼. Off at 2:32. Winner, Mrs. R. Feinberg's b. f. (4) by Pharamond II—Siren. Trained by H. Baker. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:53⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHARIEN, $4.70, $3.10, $2.10; ALLESSANDRO, $4.20, $2.70; SPOON BREAD, $2.30.
PHARIEN was steadied while closest to JIMSON BELLE'S pace, took command when placed to drive, was shaken up in midstretch and held on gamely in final test. ALLESSANDRO was rated early, came out to improve position but hung through stretch. SPOON BREAD, slow to begin, went to contention boldly on backstretch and was tiring at end.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good. Won eased up; place driving. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:01. Winner, E. Talbert's b. f. (3) by Stimulus—Scarborough. Trained by R. F. Curran. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:53.

D. C. Insurance Sales Finally Turn Upward

By S. Oliver Goodman

Halting a downward trend of 13 months' standing, Washington life insurance sales scored a 5 per cent increase in March. Sales for the month totaled $5,018,000, according to the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau of Hartford, Conn.

However, local sales of ordinary insurance for the first quarter ran 29 per cent under those of the corresponding 1942 period. The trend reversal in March brought cheer to local insurance men who watched sales here shrink 18 per cent last year and then saw a continuation of the trend in January and February, this year.

Nationally, life insurance sales in March were 12 per cent heavier than last year but were 27 per cent less for the first quarter.

Virginia's sales in March were up 12 per cent but were down 24 per cent for the first quarter and Maryland reported a sales drop of 22 per cent for March.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

R., F. & P. Net Up 27 Per cent.

Operating revenues of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad Co. last year were $28,-117,70.5, an increase of 100.27 per cent over 1941, Norman Call, company president, reported today to the board of directors.

Passenger revenue for last year was $10,734,708.18, or 121.53 per cent greater than in 1941, while freight revenue was $15,086,050.51, an increase of 98.24 per cent.

The company's net operating income of $4,015,052.82 was 58.30 per cent above the previous year.

A dividend of $6 per share was paid on nonvoting common stock, and a $6 dividend plus an extra $2 a share on common voting stock and dividend obligations. Holders of 7 per cent guaranteed stocks will receive $1 extra dividend, and holders of 6 per cent guaranteed a $2 extra dividend.

Lumber Shortage Growing

Lumber production this year will be more than two billion feet short of the War Production Board's goal of 32 billion feet set in January, Henry Clepper, chief of the program section of WPB's lumber division reported yesterday.

Basing the estimate on reports of first quarter production, Clepper said the lumber shortage has grown "progressively worse" in the last four months and has spread to nearly all commercial species.

The reduced output was ascribed, at a recent meeting of the millwork industry advisory committee, to loss of manpower, bad weather and shortage of equipment. Other factors blamed were the increased use of lumber for war purposes and its widespread substitution for metals.

J. Philip Boyd, lumber division director, said box and crating requirements for war purposes may increase to the point where they will take 50 per cent of all lumber produced this year.

Independent Retailers Show 13% Sales Gain

Sales of independent retailers increased 13 per cent last month compared with the same month a year ago, the Commerce Department reported yesterday. March dollar sales were 10 per cent higher than those recorded for February. The department said the estimates were based on reports from 14,738 independent stores in 38 States.

Steel Rate to Increase

New York, April 19 (AP).—The Nation's steel mills will operate at 99.1 per cent of rated capacity this week, with output of 1,716,100 tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today. This was up from last week's percentage of 98.8, or a total of 1,710,900 tons produced.

Trend Uneven In Stock List; Rails Higher

By the Associated Press

New York, April 19.—The stock market today ran into a little profit cashing on last week's upswing and, while this was never urgent, it was sufficient to stem an early advance ranging from fractions to more than a point.

Selected rails, industrials and utilities made the best showing in the forenoon but many of these wavered and were slightly under water at the close. Plus marks were well distributed, however, and final prices were no worse than moderately irregular.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks ended with a net decline of one-tenth of a point at 48.4. Of 842 individual issues traded, 362 were up, 261 down and 219 unchanged. Transfers of 907,440 shares compared with 902,949 in the preceding full session.

International Telephone and National Supply were among favorites managing to edge into new high ground for 1943 or longer by minor amounts.

United Gas Improvement turned relatively lively at the last and finished ¼ higher at 8⅜ when shareholders voted concurrence in the company's partial liquidation plan already approved by the S. E. C.

Bonds of Northwestern ran up 2 to 7 points when the Supreme Court refused to upset the road's reorganization plan which had received the blessing of the I. C. C. At Chicago wheat was off ¼ to up ⅝ of a cent a bushel and hogs steady to 10 cents in arrears. Cotton was unchanged to 30 cents a bale lower.

Westinghouse Starts Training 16-Year-Old Boys

Bloomfield, N. J., April 19 (AP).—The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. announced that it had selected a group of 16-year-old boys to train as mechanics to replace men called into the armed services.

John F. Fox, training supervisor at the company's lamp division here, said that while training of youths was not completely new with Westinghouse, 18 had been the usual starting age.

The boys, picked on the basis of high school training and aptitude tests, will get three years of training in machine tool operations. Their work, Fox said, would be subject to child labor regulations.

Stockholders Vote U. G. I. Simplification

Philadelphia, April 19 (AP).—Stockholders of the United Gas Improvement Co. today voted approval of a proposed plan to simplify the company's corporate structure in conformance with the Holding Company Act.

The plan, contemplating the distribution of $255,000,000 in cash assets among stockholders, previously had been appro

FAMILY NEWS IS GOOD NEWS

THERE'S Bill. Happy as seventeen million dollars. Tired maybe—hungry probably, like the healthy young animal he is.

But contented, at peace with the world. Because he's got a letter.

One that signs off very simply:

"Love from all the family."

It says more than that to Bill.

It's got Dad's gruff voice in it, as Dad's voice is when he wants to tell you he thinks you're swell—and doesn't quite know how.

It's got Mother's gentle smile, and Sis's easy, tomboyish grin. There's Mickey's excited zeal there too, in a simple sentence about the way he's littered up the back yard with his scrap collection.

Bill gets a laugh imagining Sis in the slacks they wear on those war jobs. Grins a little at the mental picture of Dad having to shovel coal all winter because the furnace was converted from oil.

And next time he steps up to the chow line and fills his own brimming cup, he'll think of Mother, frugaling out the family's coffee—and as usual skimping no one as much as herself.

So somehow "back home" means something different to Bill now.

Not the gang at the bowling alley, not the heavy date he's got for Saturday, not even that itch for a car all his own.

No, "back home" means a bunch of swell people that belong together—that work and think and live for and with each other.

Back home means "the family," and whether Bill knows it or not, the family means America.

For it was the family that made this country.

Settled it, hewed it out of the wilderness, cultured it, nursed it, built it up, made it big and rich and powerful.

It was families laboring together, playing together, planning together just as today they are buying together, managing together, making decisions together on the basis of the family interest.

We can thank the war for bringing America's families together again.

It's the biggest thing that's happened to this country in many a year.

It represents rebirth of the power that made this country great—that established our ideals—that created our standards—that defined our principles.

In such rebirth lie the surest augury of Victory—and the greatest hope for the future of America, of American ways, of American aims and ambitions, and of American institutions.

Every issue of LOOK is deliberately edited to interest the whole family. Our belief in the family as a social unit, an editorial unit and a buying unit has won this magazine a circulation of more than 2,000,000. Tested and proved before the war, our editorial aims give this publication a special interest and place which, we believe, few other magazines can match today.

For Famous Faces

Columbia, Mo.—Gen. Dwight Eisenhower took time out to write Mrs. Emma Shock thanking her for that fancy, hand-knitted wash cloth. The hobby of the 80-year-old woman is sending cloths to distinguished people.

She's had replies from President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Henry Wallace, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and others.

125-Pound Baby

Lieut. H. T. Halla couldn't pacify the youngster.

"He snarled a couple of times, so I called the Zoo," the lieutenant's report said. The baby, a 125-pound lion.

Transfer Lid Clamped Tight by Commission

The lid on transfers between agencies has been clamped on tight by the Civil Service Commission i na new regulation following up War Manpower's sweeping job "freezing" order. The language of the commission is plain and clear. It says: "No transfers will be authorized unless there is specific finding to the effect that the transfer will make it possible for the individual to make a more effective contribution to the war program in his new position than in his old one. No transfer will be authorized on the ground that an increase in salary is involved."

The order will tend to call a halt to pirating between agencies for personnel. It won't stop transfers for health and family reasons, but the very best way to get transferred is to prove to the commission that you can do a better job and that your office won't give you the opportunity. The program is a grand break for the commission to force greater utilization of personnel. It has now an ax over the heads of the agencies. Unless the departments use their employes effectively the commission can step in and transfer them elsewhere. The commission shouldn't muff this one.

The order also put teeth into War Manpower's "freezing" order. The commission served notice that it'll direct removal of persons illegally hired. And it's illegal for the Government today to hire a person away from an "essential" industry. The commission will approve for employment a new employe who, for the preceding 30 days, was not engaged in an "essential" activity even though the Government wage may be higher. But the Government now can't hire an employe away from an "essential" industry as defined by War Manpower. Washington hasn't an employment stabilization agreement, but it'll have one soon. However, in areas where they're in effect an employe can transfer one from essential industry to another under certain conditions.

In official quarters yesterday the view was expressed that the Government would soon have to break down its activities into essential and nonessential. The priority list of agencies compiled by the Budget Bureau could be used as a guide. If such a list should be set up it would virtually force the less essential agenices out of business by refusing to give them manpower.

GOVERNMENT GIRL NOTES: Agriculture's Federal Crop Insurance Office at Birmingham, Alabama, has sent in $58 to the GOVERNMENT GIRL fund which places the office 100 per cent behind the drive . . . Local 684 of the National Federation of Federal Employees at Murfreesboro, Tennessee, is collecting for the fund . . . Evidence mounts that the GOVERNMENT GIRL idea proposed by Miss Agnes Richardy, Veterans Administration employe, in this column is making a hit in the ranks of Federal workers in and out of Washington . . . The Adjutant General's Office in the War Department yesterday had raised $2792 and workers are confident the fund will swell to $5000 before the campaign closes on Saturday . . . Remember, it only costs a dollar to be a GOVERNMENT GIRL shareholder and men as well as women can contribute.

Office of Price Administration Prentiss Broawn is reported to be ready to appoint George Burke of Ann Arbor, Mich., as his general counsel to succeed David Ginsburg. Labor leaders, however, may stop it. A delegation will protest the proposed appointment. . . . War Department employes who were supposed to be paid yesterday will be paid today. Moreover, the department denies that it's planning a further lag between paydays. Salaries, for example, that were due on the fifteenth will be paid on 19, 20, 21, 22. The schedule is a day earlier when the pay period does not fall on a Sunday. It has been rumored that the paydays would be extended even further. . . . The Cox Committee is doing a thorough job on the Federal Communications Commission in an effort to dig up dirt. It's checking on all travel vouchers and long distance telephone calls of the commissioners. Chief committee investigator is William Larson, former FBI man.

War Secretary Stimson's order to save manpower has won the praise of Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming who described it as an "admirable statement." Flemming pledged the backing of the commission in classifying employes' salaries by the degree and nature of responsibilities rather than by the number of employes supervised. One of the results of the save-manpower order will be the ousting of incompetents and the filling of their places by employes in the War Bonds Division. The division is going to Chicago and about 75 per cent of the 2000 employes have elected to remain here. To make places for the good employes the incompetents will be axed . . . Commerce's credit union bought $5000 in war bonds yesterday from Mrs. Jesse Jones, wife of the Secretary, who manned the war bond booth in the building lobby. Mrs. Jones matched the purchase.

Woman Hurt Fatally When Struck by Bus

Driver Unaware of Accident Until Arrest; 3 Injured On Slippery Street

Traffic deaths this year 25
Traffic deaths this date last year 40
Total traffic deaths last year .108

A 70-year-old woman was fatally injured last night when struck at Pennsylvania Avenue and Twelfth Street Northwest by a Capital Transit Co. bus, whose driver completed the circuit of his run before he knew he had hit the woman.

The victim, Anna B. Albert, 426 Ninth Street Southwest, was pronounced dead at Emergency Hospital at 9:25 p. m., about a half-hour after the accident.

Frank J. McGowan, 25, of 47 Chillum Road, Chillum, Md., driver of the bus, told police he did not know he had struck the woman until he was arrested at Pennsylvania Avenue and Eighth Street Northwest, the southern terminus of the line. After the bus had hit the woman and continued north on Twelfth Street, a witness, Louis Bernhart, 56, of 407 Grand View Boulevard, Alexandria, Va., ran after the vehicle and caught it at the next red traffic light. He knocked on the door but the driver drove off without opening the door as the light changed.

Lookout Is Broadcast

Police were called and a lookout was broadcast for the driver. McGowan was arrested 42 minutes later.

Taken to police headquarters, McGowan was questioned and later released to appear at a coroner's inquest. Police said he has had three months' experience operating a bus.

Earlier in the day, three persons were injured, one seriously, on Washington's slippery streets.

Ralph O. Weber, 15, of 340 Tenth Street Northeast, was injured when the bicycle he was riding east on D Street Northeast collided with an automobile traveling in the opposite direction as it turned south into Thirteenth Street. Police said the car was operated by Irving G. Stead, 58, of 326 Tennessee Avenue Northeast.

Weber was removed to Casualty Hospital, where he was admitted and treated for a possible factured skull, lacerations of the scalp, cerebral concussion and fracture of the left collar bone.

Injured by Skidding

Mrs. Myrtle E. Tudge, 37, of 3101 Naylor Road Southeast, suffered an injured back while driving east on Good Hope Road Southeast near Twenty-fifth Street when she attempted to pass a parked truck, and skidded into it and a parked car. She was admitted to Providence Hospital where she was treated for possible fractured vertebrae. Last night her condition was described as "fairly good."

Steven H. Womelsdorff, 65, of Coalton, W. Va., was struck while crossing Thirteenth Street Northwest near Pennsylvania Avenue by a bus turning right into Pennsylvania Avenue. The bus, police said, was operated by Robert I. Hall, 27, of 2222 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, who said he had nine months' experience. Womelsdorff was taken to Emergency Hospital where he was treated for lacerations and possible head injuries. Last night his condition was described as "good."

Geehan Exonerated

James J. Gehan, 31, of 55 Ellison Street Northeast, streetcar operator, was exonerated yesterday by a jury under Conorer A. Magruder MacDonald, who said the death of George Freeze last Friday was "accidental, due to the pedestrian's own fault."

Mr. Freeze, 59, an electrician, 207 D Street Northwest, was struck April 11 while crossing Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, near Twelfth Street, by the streetcar eastbound on Pennsylvania Avenue.

Jews in Service Pack Hotel Ballroom as Seder Ceremony Opens Traditional Feast of Passover

Bishop Tucker Noon Preacher At Epiphany

America's role as leader in postwar reconstruction must be dominated by unselfish motives, the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church and Bishop of Virginia, said yesterday.

The gray-haired prelate said it is easy for us to talk now about an idealistic postwar world of brotherhood, but asked if Americans would be able to make the sacrifices that such an order would demand.

"We must seek for the world as a whole those things we seek for ourselves, and not use religion for our own spiritual satisfaction and our own spiritual welfare," he declared at Holy Week services in Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G Street Northwest.

Bishop Tucker said that Christ's experiences from Palm Sunday to Easter constituted "one battle that has had the most effect on the world's history."

Just as that spiritual struggle perfected Christ's character, so must our own suffering strengthen our character, said the prelate.

Before the service, Bishop Tucker told The Post he felt members of Amereican churches are doing a splendid job in buying war bonds and stamps.

While he does not approve of churches staging bond rallies at services, he does feel that clergymen should do all in their power to urge members to support the second war loan drive.

Church organizations, including the Episcopal, already have bought thousands of dollars worth of bonds, he said, and many churches have converted funds for new church buildings into war bonds, since war priorities have stopped erection of many buildings.

Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, Epiphany rectory, conducted yesterday's service. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, speaks today at 12.

Seabees Chief to Speak

Comdr. John R. Perry, U. S. N., director of administration and personnel of the Seabees, will address the meeting of the Traffic Club of Washington tomorow at 6:30 p. m. at the Hotel Mayflower.

Commander Perry has been with the Seabees, the Navy's construction battalions, from the time the organization had 1 officer and 99 men until the present time when it numbers about 6000 officers and 220,000 men.

Rites in Synagogues Scheduled Today Throughout District

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Throngs of servicemen and servicewomen of the Jewish faith streamed into Washington last night for Seder services, opening the Passover observance amid a world at war.

More than 1000 of them, many accompanied by families and friends, packed the Willard Hotel ballroom, where Chaplain Arye Lev of the Army Chief of Chaplains' Office, said in his Seder message that Passover symbolizes humanity's eternal struggle for freedom.

"Moses Still Lives"

Chaplain Lev said that the United Nations' battle to save the world from modern tyranny means that "Moses still lives."

Among guests at the function were Deputy Chief of Army Chaplains and Mrs. George F. Rixey, Chaplain Alva Brasted of Fort Belvoir and former Army chief of chaplains and Chaplain Harry C. Fraser, air liaison officer, chief of chaplains' office, all Protestants.

The Willard function was one of several Seder feasts arranged by USO workers of the Jewish Community Center, who have been officially designated by the War and Navy Departments for religious and welfare work among servicemen of their faith.

Religious Rites Today

Cooperating were the Army and Navy committee of the Jewish Welfare Board and Washington Post No. 58, of the Jewish War Veterans of the United States.

Other USO-sponsored programs were a Seder feast for warworkers at Beth Sholom Synagogue, Eighth and Shepherd Streets Northwest; and for Jewish patients at Walter Reed and St. Elizabeth's Hospitals.

The first day of Passover will begin today with religious services in synagogues. The feast, which runs eight days, commemorates the Jews' liberation from Egyptian bondage in Old Testament days.

Heavy Rain Expected To End Today

Approximately 1.29 inches of rain fell on Washington and its environs during the current storm but the Weather Bureau held out the cheering forecast that the rain would stop early today.

The forecaster, however, said that yestreday's high temperature of 47 would not be exceeded today and that the high winds that buffeted the city would probably continue. The maximum velocity was 43 miles an hour at about 3 p. m.

The temperature yesterday was fairly even in that it did not vary much, but the Weather Bureau said that the day's high was 17 degrees below the average April high.

Temperature throughout the month, has been 4 degrees per day below normal. This despite the fact that April Fool's day hinted at summer with a temperature of 78 degrees. But this has proved to have been the warmest day this month. The first two days were warmer than usual, but 10 out of the first 18 days registered subnormal temperatures, and there have been five days with weather below freezing.

This has not been an April of all-time records, however. Highest temperature ever recorded in Washington was 95 degrees, April 27, 1915. The low was 15 degrees, April 1, 1923.

District Finance Bill Sidetracked

Consideration of the $54,789,434 appropriation bill to finance the District Government through the new fiscal year beginning July 1 was sidetracked in the House yesterday by prolonged discussion of the appropriations bill for the Department of Agriculture.

Committee leaders expected the bill would probably reach the floor for discussion today, and asserted that since the bill involved no controversial items rapid approval was expected.

Victory Sidelights

Surprise Air-Raid Test Planned Here Between April 27 and 30

A surprise air raid test will be staged sometime between 12:01 a. m. Tuesday, April 27, and midnight Thursday, April 30, Civilian Defense Director H. C. Whitehurst announced yesterday.

This will be the twenty-first air-raid drill staged in the District since the inception of the Civilian Defense organization, and the fourth held this year. The last one was a blackout on March 16.

It is not yet known whether this will be a daylight test or a practice blackout. The entire metropolitan area, including nearby Maryland and Virginia counties will participate in the drill.

Postwar Plan Talk

Thomas W. McManus, an organizer and past commander of the California Department, American Legion, will be guest speaker at the meeting of Cooley-McCullough Post, at American Legion headquarters, 2437 Fifteenth Street Northwest, at 8:30 p. m. today. His subject will be "Postwar Efforts to Avoid Collapse After Victory." McManus is vice president of the California State Society here.

Defense Uniforms

A standard uniform for male and female District civilian defense workers in the protective services will be adopted in the near future, Capt. W. L. Clemans, executive assistant in the Defense Department announced last night.

Although there are some uniforms worn by members of the various services, they are not at all standardized, Clemans said. A meeting of the chiefs of services will be held to discuss such details of the uniform, including insignia to designate the branch of the service and the length and rank of the individual's tenure in the service.

Service Aid Talks

Organizations giving assistance to servicemen will be the subjects of a group making talks at the Sulgrave Club, Thursday morning, from 10 to 12:30 o'clock.

Those on the program are Rear Admiral Thomas M. Molloy, Coast Guard Welfare official; Comdr. Albert C. Jacobs, head of casualties and allotments section, welfare division of the Navy, and Mrs. Frederick Gore Richards, executive secretary of the District Auxiliary of Navy Relief.

Hundreds Train as USO Hostesses

Rush of Volunteers Results in Special Hour Arrangement; Men Also Attracted

So many volunteers have responded to the War Hospitality Committee's hostess training program that local USO units will have to initiate day and night courses to accommodate girls whose working hours conflict with the present setup.

Miss Dorothy Height, USO secretary of the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A., yesterday told a meeting of the committee for training of volunteers, that the course for Negro junior hostesses at the Y was originally planned for 100 persons. More than 400, however, applied for training and will be "graduated" tonight.

Men Also Attracted

Phillip Schiff, USO director of the Jewish Welfare Board, also announced that about 600 girls have already completed the course at the Jewish Community Center here and that an additional 200 had completed the course for senior hostesses. The activity, he said, also has attracted the services of many men who are over age or deferred from military service.

Yesterday's meeting, called at the Servicemen's Center, 306 Ninth Street Northwest, discussed and approved hostess training courses under way here at various USO recreation agencies.

Certification Cards

Miss Mabel R. Cook, USO director of the Y. W. C. A. and chairman of the committee, told USO representatives that all trainees who completed the hostess course should carry certification cards—which would enable them to serve as hostesses not only at their own training centers, but also at all other USO and Army recreation functions for servicemen. The meeting approved a draft of the card and the hope was expressed that in the near future all girls serving in recreational activities for servicemen would cary such cards.

Of the 11 courses now conducted in Washington, those reported and approved yesterday were the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A. and Jewish Community Center programs, and courses being given at the National Catholic Community Service Center and the Y. M. C. A. Response from other groups, according to Miss Cook, has been enthusiastic, with the Washington Federation of Churches, representing 164 Washington churches.

The Pentagon Building's personnel director, she said, has asked that such a course be given her 20,000 or more girls.

Senate Backs Plan to Pay For Overtime

Without debate the Senate yesterday accepted the conference report on the Government employes, overtime paybill affecting 1,500,000 Federal workers and sent it to the House, which has agreed to act on it today.

House consideration of the report was stalled yesterday by debate on the Agriculture Department appropriations measure, but because of the necessity of having action on the bill completed by April 30, when the present temporary measure expires, leaders agreed to bring it up today without fail.

Representative Reese (Republican) of Kansas, sole dissenter from the conference report, announced that he would ask the House to consider the fact that conferees have removed the salary ceiling limit of $5000 which the House placed on the bill.

As the measure now stands employes getting more than $2900 per annum may receive a raise on the first $2900 of their salaries, if they work 48 hours a week regardless of how high the salaries go. Heads of departments, independent agencies and bureaus are excluded from the benefits of the bill.

30% Normal Need

Restaurants Hit Canned Goods Ration

Fifty representatives of restaurants, hotels and dining cars yesterday complained to the OPA that the system of rationing processed foods—canned goods and others—had resulted in them getting only 30 per cent of their normal needs.

The complaint was made at a meeting of hotel men and restaurant operators which was called by the OPA for hte purpose of evaluating its rationing program.

The meeting will continue today with the discussion centering around the results of meat and fats rationing.

Dr. Archie Palmer, OPA rationing expert, presided.

Diners Like Housewives

The operators of eating houses asked that their quota of processed foods be doubled, but the OPA officials told them that the restaurant customer was considered just the same as the housewife and those who eat at home, whose allotments of canned goods also had been cut stringently.

Also at the meeting a discussion was held on the OPA rule that a restaurant can count as a customer any person who buys anything there. It was pointed out that this resulted in the restaurant that sells drinks being allowed to obtain food points for its drinking customers, regardless of what he buys.

'Dry' Restaurants Handicapped

A spokesman for the OPA said it had been unanimously agreed that this was working an unfair hardship on the so-called "dry" restaurant.

It was made clear that the OPA had made no commitments as to what relief would be granted to restaurants and the meeting was held merely to determine what had been the effect of rationing.

Cafe owners pointed out that there had been a big increase in their business, particularly dinner trade, since rationing, as families whose coupons had been exhausted were coming to restaurants for food.

Widow Loses Compensation Law Decision

The United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that under the provisions of the Compensation Act a widow is not entitled to compensation unless she was living with her husband at the time of his death, for reasons of dependency, or was separated for justifiable cause, or by reason of his desertion.

The decision was made in the appeal of Mrs. Annie Weeks, 511 A Street Northwest, against ruling of District Court Justice Jennings Bailey that an award authorized her by the deputy commissioner of the United States Compensation Commission on the death of her husband, which resulted from injuries received while an employe of the Nachman Furniture Co. here, was not justified.

In the decision it was stated that Mrs. Weeks was running a house at the time her husband left her and that his purpose of taking up a separate residence was to receive employment and relief benefits from the Public Relief Bureau.

"No doubt married people may be justified in living apart for any reason that seems to be good; but with possible exceptions nor pertinent rere, a wife who lives apart does so for what is called 'justifiable cause' only because of her husband's matrimonial misconduct.

"A wife who is not supported by her husband, and who voluntarily lives apart from him without great provocation, is unlikely to suffer great financial or emotional loss when he dies," the decision stated.

It pointed out that the Compensation Act does not entitle such a wife to compensation.

Club Bond Drive

The Mosean Club of Washington will stage a war bond drive at a meeting tomorrow at 9 p. m. at 909 G Street Northwest. Members who can't attend but who wish to buy bonds are asked to contact Jack Slan, committee chairman.

Cogswell Sees Slum Rent Cure

Charges Higher Than 1941 Figure Can Be Trimmed, Official Declares

Where slum housing rents are higher than the January 1, 1941 figure set as rent ceiling, the District Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Cogswell, said yesterday they can easily be cut.

Cogswell made the statement in answer to a demand by the D'Alesandro committee, investigating slum conditions in the District.

He also said that even if the figure was the same as the 1941 rent, adjustments could be made through the filing of an application in the form of a complaint from the tenant, to be filed with his office.

The Office of the Recorder of Deeds announced that a complete list of all slum properties, together with the names of the owners would be compiled and released by next week.

Ernest F. Henry, general counsel for the rent administrator, said he had checked some of the property in Kings Court listed by the congressional committee, and the tenants had told him they were paying the same rent as they did on January 1, 1941.

Meanwhile, John Ihlder, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority last night told the Mid-City Citizens Association that Washington is now ripe for the spreading of an epidemic due to overcrowding in existing housing. He spoke at the Thomson School.

Calling for an accelerated housing program now, he pointed out that the immigrant program which supplemented the slum reclamation program in 1941 is not suitable for Washington. It means that only those classified as warworkers and who have come to Washington since July 1, 1941, may be placed in new Federal housing developments.

Aside from the fact that the new housing projects are insufficient even to harbor the new arrivals, many persons coming to Washington are not classified as warworkers. Although before the war, Washington ranked third among the Nation's cities in building of new housing, it was not building enough to keep up with the population even then.

Ihlder said that the mid-city contained some of the worst examples of the overcrowding which he considers dangerous to the health of Washington warworkers and consequently to the war effort.

City News In Brief

Because 43 operators in 26 beauty shops along Florida Avenue Northwest between Ninth and Seventeenth Streets were discovered Saturday to be operating without a license, the Bureau of Cosmetology yesterday asked precinct policemen to check beauticians on their beats for licenses.

The bureau has only one official inspector, Miss Daisy Martin. April 15 was the last day to renew licenses.

Architecture Talks

The Thornton Society will hold its second meeting in the Arts Club today at 8:15 p. m. and will be addressed by Thomas T. Waterman, writer on early American architecture, and William Partridge, consultant to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, it was announced yesterday.

Partridge will speak on "Thomas Jefferson and the Founding of the National Capital" and Waterman will discuss Dr. William Thornton. Dr. Leicester B. Holland, chief of the Fine Arts Division of the Library of Congress, will introduce the speakers.

Presentation Friday

"King of Kings," Cecil B. DeMille's cinematic portrayal of the life of Christ, will be shown at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest, today through Friday at 8 p. m., and also Good Friday at 10 a. m., 12:15 and 3 p. m. Admission is free.

Seam Squirrels Dine

The eighteenth birthday and Seam Squirrels' Dinner of Top Notch Tent (TNT) No. 1 Military Order of the Cootie, "honor degree of the Veterans of Foreign Wars," will be observed today at 7:30 p. m. in Woodman of the World Hall, 935 G Place Northwest.

Lieut. Superfine Wins Navy Medal

The Navy awarded the Silver Star Medal yesterday to Lieut. Irving J. Superfine, for gallantry in boarding an abandoned vessel in active combat area to obtain strategic material. His wife, Mrs. Margorie E. Superfine, lives at 3121 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

The Navy reported that Superfine, with limited personnel, stayed aboard the vessel in the Soonons Island area for several days and succeeded in salvaging the material despite enemy attack. The type of cargo salvaged was not disclosed.

Ersatz Cow Refuses to Pour Milk For Gaze of Inquiring Public

Government officials, representatives of the Army and Navy and members of the press gathered in the basement of the Commerce Department yesterday to see a scheduled demonstration of a mechanical cow, but unlike its bovine prototype, 'Betsy" did not function on schedule.

The mechanical cow's failure to produce was not temperament in this case, but a lack of adequate electric current. The "cow," already operating aboard many United States warships and at Army and Navy bases, contains a heating unit an icing machine and an agitator. And the Commerce Department was not prepared to provide that much extra juice on short notice.

"Betsy" will never supplant the cud-chewing kind, but only supplement her. Instead of grass, one fills her "innards" with powdered milk, sweet butter and water. Out comes perfectly mixed, homogenized milk. At least, that's what's supposed to happen. It didn't yesterday.

Officials of the United Dairy Co., which makes the mechanical cow, were quite embarrassed for "Betsy." Today, they assured, "Betsy" will perform in her most cowlike manner, with everything but the "moo." The demonstration will be held in the ballroom of the Washington Hotel at 12:15 p. m.

There's only one hitch about "Betsy's" practical use aboard ship or at isolated bases. That was pointed out by Fred Orsinger, manager of the Aquarium, where the demonstration was scheduled yesterday.

"If you get hungry for meat you can't knock it in the head."

Dope Peddler Faces 90 Years; His Heroin 98 Per Cent Sugar

A maximum 90-year prison term faced Clarence Cromer, 27, Negro, 1033 Fourth Street Northwest, described by Assistant United States Attorney Bernard Margolius as one of the largest wholesale dope peddlers ever convicted here, after his conviction yesterday on 12 counts of violating the Harrison Narcotic Act.

Cromer was arrested September 24, 1942, by Federal narcotic agents in collaboration with Metropolitan police, who confiscated 2700 grains of what was being sold as heroin, according to testimony at the trial.

The arrest was made at the fourth Street address, where Cromer was said to have made five dope sales to a Government agent between August 26 and September 4.

Margolius brought out testimony proving what Cromer sold as pure heroin consisted of 98.2 per cent sugar. This brought a price of $40 an ounce, it was testified.

Cromer was convicted in 1940 on similar charges, Margolius said, and besides receiving a prison sentence had several cars and a truck confiscated.

LeRoy W. Morrison, agent in charge here of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, termed Cromer & "spoke in a huge dope ring." He said that others in the ring had been arrested during October and November of 1942 and had pleaded guilty.

B. T. Mitchell, assistant chief counsel of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, was associated with Margolius.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Old Fools

The middle-aged and elderly husbands who, finding themselves receiving more feminine attention (especially from the younger girls in offices) due to the man shortage, imagine that all women have just become awakened to their fatal charm—and act accordingly.

The paunchy public official with the bald head who fancies he can shake a wicked leg on the dance floor, and who is constantly seen at night clubs, hotels and other public places stepping rhythmically on the party slippers of young women.

The woman past 30 and above 115 pounds in weight who wears her dresses above, or even at her knees (often with rolled socks) because everybody else is doing it, and she wants to show she is as much of an up-and-comer as anyone.

The midde-aged woman who does not realize that a glamour bob, a form-fitting sweater and a kiddie's cap accentuate her years rather than efface them.

The man who says he doesn't feel a day older than he did 20 years ago; the woman who thinks she doesn't look a day older than she did 10 years ago.

The woman who fancies herself fascinating to her daughter's servicemen friends and who plays the role of a college widow among them.

The man who thinks that the young girls for whom he buys expensive steaks go to dinner with him chiefly for the pleasure of companionship.

The woman who in her youth was a belle (likely a Southern one) and whose overdone make-up and arch airs testify that she has never quite gotten over it.

The woman who boasts that she keeps young by keeping away from her own generation and associating only with youth; the woman who boasts publicly that she "just loves young people."

The mother who fails to cultivate friends and interests of her own and who hangs on to her children for companionship; the father who does the same.

All men and women who think that immaturity of mind and emotion are engaging evidences of youth.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

"Back to the soil" has become the latest slogan of Truthtown socialites. Mrs. Persiflage Clipper is organizing a group of smart young matrons to be known as the Merrie Milkmaids, who will volunteer to help on nearby dairy farms—whenever their other interests do not conflict. Classes in the technique of milking will be conducted soon in the ballroom of the Hotel Swank on a handsome artificial cow sculped out of soap by the famous artist, Bagatelli Spermacelli. "All that is holding us up from getting started" said Mrs. Clipper last night, "is the fact that we can't agree on whether to have our uniforms designed by Mainbocher or Hattie Carnegie."

Mrs. Featherton Daubler is sponsoring a farm group to be known as the Strawberry Blondes, who will pick strawberries on nearby farms—on pleasant days. "We are sorry to have to turn down so many brunette applicants," said Mrs. Daubler, "but we feel that our organization will get better publicity if restricted to blondes." Mrs. Daubler refused to comment on the report that her group might go to Hollywood soon instead of nearby strawberry patches.

Easter Casualty

Mrs. Slinker Hopping, Truthtown fashion leader, will not appear in the Easter parade this year. In making the announcement yesterday to the press through her chef (her butler is in the Army), Mrs. Hopping said her action was a protest over the late date on which Easter falls this year. "THEY," she said, "should have known better than to set Easter so late. Naturally, my spring outfits are all passe by this time. While I, of course, have my summer outfits I feel it would be in bad taste to wear them on Easter, which is primarily a spring event. It is all part of a subversive attempt to embarrass people who stand for the finer things of life."

Postwar Beauty

Mrs. Montclair St. Vitus, ace career woman, announces as a new "peace and postwar" line of perfumes at her combination herb, antique and dress shoppe. "The war and victory cosmetics are getting out of date," said Mrs. St. Vitus, "and I felt that Truthtown was entitled to some more modern lines. We have a lovely new Armistice perfume, a Postwar foundation creme, and an International Patrol hair tonic. All women concerned about the future will find these a great help to their morale."

RATION POINTS

What are Government plans for this season's home canning? Homemakers will not be required to surrender ration points to obtain sugar for cannning this summer. That much, and no more, is definite. Mrs. Judith Russell, consumer information specialist at the Office of Price Administration, believes, however, that the plan will be similar to that used last canning season. Mrs. Russell, in a short interview, gave these as the principal questions yet to be settled before sugar distribution plans can be made public:

1. How much sugar shall be the maximum allotment of each member of the family?

2. What decisions shall be left to the discretion of the local ration boards?

3. Will additional allotments of sugar be made for use in jelly, jam, etc?

4. What printed form shall be used by those making application?

Ration Deadlines:

COFFEE—Coupon No. 26 in Book No. 1 is good for 1 pound until April 25.

SUGAR—Coupon No 12 in Book No. 1 is good for 5 pounds until May 31.

MEATS, butter, margarine, lards, fats and oils, cheese and canned fish—Red coupons lettered A and B in Book No. 2 are valid until April 30.

Those lettered C and D are valid until April 30. Those lettered E are valid from April 25 to an unannounced date.

Coupons need not be used week by week but must be redeemed by the end of period. For example, red coupons, letter C, valid since April 11, need not be redeemed until April 30, its deadline.

CANNED FRUITS, canned vegetables, soups, fruits and vegetable juices, frozen foods, baby foods, catsup, dried beans (except soybeans) and other processed foods—Blue coupons lettered D, E and F can be used until April 30.

FUEL OIL—Coupon No. 5 is good for 10 gallons until September 30.

GASOLINE—Coupons No. 5A are good for 3 gallons each but must last through July 22. B and C coupons, good for 3 gallons each, expire according to the date indicated in the individual books.

SHOES—Coupon No. 17 in in Book No. 1 is redeemable for one pair until June 15. Footwear not covered by rationing includes certain types of play shoes, hard-soled house slippers, soft-soled moccasins, infants shoes (size 4 or smaller), shoes with fabric uppers and rubber soles, ski and skate shoes, locker sandals, bathing slippers, overshoes, waterproof or snow and water repellant footwear.

Keep Your Lamps Clean

It is estimated that clean reflector bowls, clean lamp bulbs and clean shades will give you from 20 to 50 per cent more light. Clean them all regularly for greater see-ability.

Reflectors: Disconnect lamp from outlet. Remove reflector from lamp. Wash reflectors, glass or plastic, in warm (not hot) soapy water. Rinse and dry thoroughly inside and out.

Lamp bulbs: Never entirely submerge a lamp bulb. The base is cemented to the glass and if the cement gets wet, the base may come loose from the glass bulb. Instead, just wipe the glass with a damp, soapy cloth, remove suds and dry well.

Dry Dishes Quickly

Have you ever tried drying the dishes with twin dish towels? A fresh dry towel in each hand disposes of them in the proverbial twinkling of an eye.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

When formulating peace plans after defeating Japan, don't overlook the Emperor. Quite easily he could become our useful tool or puppet in setting up a democratic or more liberal form of government for the inhabitants of the land of the Rising Sun. This is the opinion of Wilfred Fleisher, guest speaker at the Women's National Democratic Club luncheon meeting yesterday at the clubhouse.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

For 17 years a correspondent in Japan, Mr. Fleisher, now correspondent for the New York Herald Tribune, said that the present Emperor of Japan is little more than a puppet in the hands of the military leaders, and that Emperor, whose chief interest is in collecting insects and playing a few rounds of golf, could be valuable to us in making peace plans.

"It is impossible to come to terms with Tojo and the other war leaders," he asserted.

"I don't think we will have to worry too much about whom we will deal with once the war is over," he explained. "The Japanese people when faced with ignominous defeat for the first time in their history of 2600 years, will oust the war leaders. Every Japanese patriot will go out and try to avenge this shame with the same fanaticism with which he now pursues the war."

Felt Undercurrent

Mr. Fleisher pointed out that for the last 10 years he was in Japan he had felt the undercurrent of a revolution and believes it will break out and sweep the country once the armies are defeated.

Author of the book "Our Enemy Japan," the speaker traced the rise of militarism and fascism in Japan until it reached tidal wave proportions September 18, 1931, when the Japs invaded Manchuria, and all liberals were swept out of the government, never to return. Even then, some people thought, liberalism would come back and reassert itself, he explained.

By 1940 Japan could be called completely totalitarian. Previously the Japs aped foreign ways and talked in terms of democracy, yet in reality the democratic veneer was very shallow, according to Mr. Fleisher.

System of Government

Explaining the system of government, he pointed out that the military always had a stranglehold. Here's the way it's done: The prime minister must appoint an admiral and a general to fill the posts of Navy and army ministers, respectively. Then the army and navy must approve his selection, or make one. They can refuse to appoint or veto his appointment, and thus make it impossible for the prime minister, who is apointed by the Emperor, to form a cabinet. Hence the army and navy holds absolute veto power over the prime minister. Also, the army and navy ministers and chiefs of staffs have direct approach to the Emperor without consent of cabinet. About all the Emperor does is to put his seal on orders.

"There's never been a known case where the Emperor refused to put his seal on any document," stated Mr. Fleisher. "Before the militarists can be stripped of their power in the future, there must be a new interpretation of the Japanese constitution."

Recalling that he was spied upon by police and servants, he related several humorous incidents depicting characteristics of the Japanese people. Then added, "Houses are scarcer in Tokyo than in Washington."

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the United States Mint, and for 12 years member of the govering board of the Women's National Democratic Club, introduced the speaker. Mrs. Curtis Shears, president, presided.

Mrs. St. George L. Sioussat, chairman of the club's war activities committee, put in an appeal for 10,000 coathangers and 200 ash trays for the home and hospital service of the Red Cross. Also, she announced a program for Friday, April 30, at the Sulgrave Club, when Mrs. O. W. McNeese will review "Jefferson—The Road to Glory," by Marie Kimball. Mrs. Kimball will be on hand to autograph copies of her book. Proceeds of the benefit lecture will be used to equip day rooms for soldiers serving near Washington.

Dress Up Your Easter Suit or Dress With Frills, Bows or Checks—and You Can Make Them Yourself

FRILLS: A torrent of crisp organdy frills on a collar is one of the most versatile types of neckwear arrangements when you don't want to fuss with a whole gilet. The collar can be just buttoned on and effectively fills in the neckline of a suit or dress. Being relatively unattached, this makes a fresh piece of icing for summer cotton town costumes. This could be made of organdy and lace or edging

BOWS: The inside story is part of this spring's neckwear news, the point being that to give a reasonably efficient look to a svelte crepe, you fill in the decolletage instead of fussing around the edges. For example, this sort of bow-tied organdy gilet . . . properly abbreviated so as not to bulk under your bodice. It could be made from a blouse you have whose sleeves are torn or worn.

CHECKS: A jobot of checked taffeta is a crisp pick-me-up for a basic dress and is literally a snap to put on. The ruffle is wide enough to do a smooth cover-up job on a dated neckline, or add a little spice to the number you've been working in all day. You could make this of ribbon

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

A new announcement has just come from the Agriculture Department that we face two more food cuts during the year. This means that the national belt will be drawn several notches tighter.

Martha Ellyn

Foods that we once considered as essentials now become luxuries. Rationing is teaching us to re-evaluate our foods. Before we start cooking a meal we ask: what can be done with the foods that are available; how far can we make them go; how versatile is their use in dishes.

We must make meatless dishes meaty—that is create an illusion of meat. We have as a nation grown up to regard meat as a necessary food. There is little wonder that we have such a belief because the substance, flavor and variety makes it a grand food.

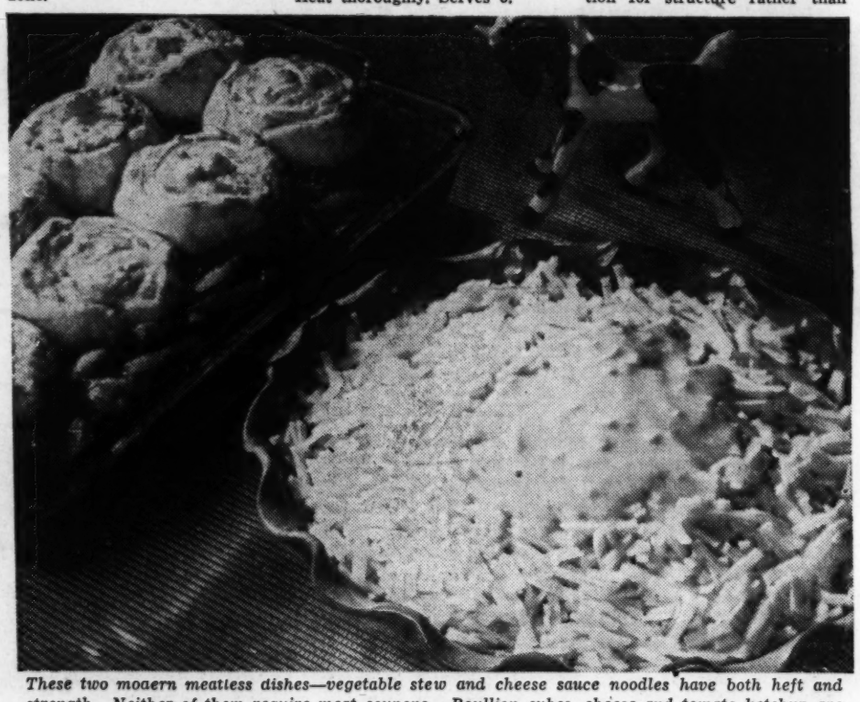
Today we are presenting two modern meatless dishes—vegetable stew with biscuit topping and noodles with tomato cheese sauce. These dishes have both heft and strength. All the rationed foods needed will be 2 bouillon cubes, 1 cup grated American cheese and 9 tablespoons tomato ketchup. The recipes for making them follow:

VEGETABLE STEW WITH BISCUIT TOPPING

Saute 2 large quartered onions in 2 tablespoons fat until tender. Add 4 diced carrots, 4 stalks celery with the tops, 1 small head cabbage, chopped fine, 2½ cups water, 2 tablespoons salt and 2 bouillon cubes. Cook until the vegetables are tender. Add 6 tablespoons tomato ketchup to 3 tablespoons flour to make a paste. Add this paste to vegetable mixture and stir until thickened. Pour into oven casserole. Roll biscuit dough to ¼ inch thickness. Sprinkle with grated cheese and roll as for jelly roll. Cut in one inch pieces and place on top of vegetables in casserole. Bake in hot oven, 400 degrees, for 20 minutes or until biscuits are done.

NOODLES WITH TOMATO CHEESE SAUCE

Cook one 6-ounce package egg noodles as directed on package. Melt one cup grated American cheese in top of double boiler. Add ½ cup milk gradually, stirring constantly, until milk is blended with cheese. Add 3 tablespoons tomato ketchup, 1 teaspoon salt and dash of pepper. Heat thoroughly. Serves 6.



These two modern meatless dishes—vegetable stew and cheese sauce noodles have both heft and strength. Neither of them require meat coupons. Boullion cubes, cheese and tomato ketchup are the only ingredients in the recipes which require rationed foods. Try these dishes and stretch your 16 meat coupons.

Free Laundry Service

Before the war, a full wash line was a sign of good living standards. Today it means thrift, high morale and the will to victory.

Great Britain has long realized that clean clothes, as well as food and shelter, are basic living essentials. Early in the war the government established the National Emergency Washing Service to provide free clothes washings for the stricken people in bombed and reception areas.

After the debris of shattered buildings had been cleared away, the devastated neighborhoods are visited by huge mobile units equipped with washing facilities capable of turning out a complete wash every 15 minutes or 1000 garments a day. Each unit consists of a truck and attached trailer which carries six tons of water, four washing machines and a drying cabinet. Expert "washers" in uniform, man the machines.

A washing advice bureau has also been set up in England to teach housewives how to conserve clothes by careful washing

Dumplings Mother Made

Remember the dumplings your mother used to make? They taste delicious along with a meat stew . . . or with frankfurters and sauerkraut . . . or atop a big kettle of meat-and-vegetable soup. Easy to make with any recipe. Drop spoonfuls on top of the stew or soup and cover tightly. Do not uncover until dumplings have steamed 12 minutes—that's the secret.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Gone—or at least going—are the days when you could blame excess weight on your age. The alibi, "for my age, I'm supposed to weigh . . ." is on its way out of our language. It never was valid. If you are over 25 years old, your age is beside the point.

I now have an ally to back me up in my crusade for computing normal weight with a variation for structure rather than birthdays. The Science News Letter recently reported that one of our leading insurance companies has come out against the so-called standard tables which allow for additional weight with advancing years. These tables allow short women to put on 13 to 15 pounds between the ages of 30 to 50, and tall women to gain 15 pounds during the same span.

Such weight gains, the life insurance people have decided, are proof that we keep right on eating the same amount of food, or more while cutting down on our activity. Of course, the excess calories go into fat.

But statistics prove that in middle age and over, the underweight outlives the overweight. You couldn't ask for a stronger argument that it isn't healthy to be overweight. While it is true that a reasonable amount of fat is a good thing for young adults, outright obesity is unhealthy at any age.

The insurance company has proposed a new set of ideal weight tables for women over 25. These would take body build into account, as well as height, but not the progressive weight gains allowed by the currently displayed charts.

As an example, it is suggested that the woman over 25 with small frame, standing 5 feet, 5 inches in shoes, should weigh between 119 and 128 pounds, with clothes. The woman of the same height, medium frame, should weigh between 127 and 135 pounds. The woman of the same height, large frame, should weigh from 133 to 145 pounds.

I am sure I feel the same way you do about people who say "I told you so," or remind you that "this item appeared in my column on such-and-such a date." But I have been fighting for so many years to bring about changes in the general method of estimating normal weight—it wasn't normal, just average!—that I am elated to have a great insurance company on my side. Now, maybe we'll get some action.

It doesn't matter how old you are, you are not entitled to excess weight for your structure. Some people think fat is a sign of health. But, actually, it puts a strain on all the vital organs, the heart, liver, kidneys and pancreas. When the muscles are clogged with fat, they become soft and flabby. The superfluous fat is not even a sign that you are well fed. The average overweight does his gaining on fats and carbohydrates, not the protective foods. In fact, as a Nation, we have been described as overweight and malnourished—and by no less an authority than Surgeon General Parran.

Headwork Improves Footwork

By Grace Martin

One of the country's foremost dance band leaders gives these tips on dance floor etiquette:

Don't keep flirting with someone else over your partner's shoulder. (It will have the same effect on his pride that it would on yours.)

Don't talk much while you are dancing. No amount of witty conversation will conceal poor footwork on your part, but it can do a lot to spoil your partner's pleasure in the rhythm of the dance.

Before you start, give some thought to your clothes; choose those that will "stay put." Don't step on the floor with a hat that keeps skating over one eye, a slip that slips or a shoe strap that slides loose.

Mary Haworth's Mail

For Three Years, Divorcee Has Shared Deep Love With Long-Married Man, Whose Indecisive Attitude Toward His Wife Makes Future Planning Impossible

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a woman just past 40, About 12 years ago, I got married; and the marriage ended in divorce five years later. About three years ago, when I was 38, I met and feel deeply in love, for the first time in my life with a fine man who is married. His married life has not been a companionable association for a good many years; but until he met me, he had never found any "substitute" companionship; and he has always been very generous with his wife and other members of his family, in material ways; and still is. He has two grown daughters who are married and have fine children of their own—to whom he is devoted. For some years, his work has kept him in Washington, although the family home is in another city; and he has spent a couple of days with his family every fortnight during this time. But the fact remains that he does not feel he ever will be able to maintain a "mutual" home with his wife in future, regardless of what we personally (he and I) decide to do.

I would like more than anything in the world to marry this man; but since they were not divorced during the years before I entered the picture,—which happened when we were introduced by mutual friends, and drifted into a pleasant acquaintance that soon developed into a shared feeling too deep to be simply handled,—I have never wanted to exert any influence in the direction of divorce. I would be reluctant to take that load on my conscience, which is already burdened, needless to say. I believe the question of divorce is so serious that it should be settled by the two parties concerned; and if they could arrive at some definite agreement about what they want, or ought, to do, we would be in a position to plan. But the situation as it stands now seems unfair to everyone concerned.

She Believes Divorce Might Cost Him Dearly

The man represents every quality I would most enjoy and appreciate in a husband; and he seems completely devoted to me. I am convinced I am a very necessary part of his life, as he is of mine; and that he, too, would be much happier if we could clear up the problem in a straightforward fashion;—because I know he worries about it as much as I do. Although he insists that "we will be married," I am afraid it is mostly wishful thinking, without any plan as to how to arrange it. And while he has said many times that he would go ahead and try to get a divorce, if I will marry him, it is quite certain that he would have to force the issue; and also certain to cause great bitterness, not only in relation to his wife but also in relation to his daughters and their children.

I would step out of the picture,—no matter how much it hurt, and regardless of the fact that I believe this to be the one great love of my life,—if he could go back and build a mutually satisfactory home life with his wife. And I would feel that I had done the bigger and better thing. But I know this cannot and will not happen. He has no incentive and he would be simply miserable. On the other hand, to return to the idea of divorce, I do not want to be the occasion of bitter estrangement from his family; and no matter what he thinks now, he might increasingly regret the loss of his family (especially separation from his children and grandchildren) in later years. And I believe divorce would entail such "loss," at least as long as his wife were alive.

I believe it is not for lack of courage on the part of either of us that we find no satisfactory solution of the problem. Surely nothing could be more painful than a perennially unsettled situation of this kind. And yet it is such a "usual" sort of problem that I have wondered why, between us, we cannot find the solution. With your exceptional understanding of human problems, you may be able to offer some suggestions that we have overlooked; or at least some helpful advice for which I shall be most grateful. COLETTE.

Man Is Passively Evading the Issue

DEAR COLETTE: As a pair, who evaluate the situation as your joint problem, you have thus far failed to "find" the solution for the simple reason that the man, who is the pivotal figure in the triangle, is tacitly declining to acknowledge and discharge his responsibility to effect a clean-cut decision, as between you and his wife, and then abide by it,—regardless of the emotional desolation that you and he presumably would share, if he renounced you in the name of duty; or despite the crucial tension, turmoil, recriminations and possible vague remorse he might expect to experience (and inflict), if he chose the alternative course of putting his life in order, and promoted a divorce from his admittedly incompatible wife, to clear ground for the construction of a "true love" marriage to you.

From what you say of him, he must be essentially a passive sort of person,—having persisted uncomfortably for "a good many years" in a marriage that gave him no real companionship; and having known no "substitute" companionship until you drifted into his life and proceeded to make yourself "necessary" to him, as a result of recognizing that he was as lonely as you; and being psychologically disposed to go on "making the best" of a generally intolerable stalemate, on the apathetic theory that if he waits long enough, something may turn up to change the face of circumstances that he is reluctant to reshape by forthright exertion. Thus, while he may not lack for courage, he certainly lacks force of character,—of the kind that hardily cuts through obstacles, when a constructive or desirable objective is visualized as waiting beyond the barricade.

His Cake-Eating Policy Takes Toll of Their Love

The latent tragedy of his performance, which both of you seem to overlook, is that in trying to serve a divided allegiance, year after year, as a means of having his cake an : eating it, too, he is slowly though inexorably undermining all that might have been permanently fine in your affection for each other—if that relationship had been either given the legitimate opportunity of marriage in which to flourish; or, failing that, had been heroically ruled out of the present reckoning, as a promise of beauty and happiness that could not be realized in existing circumstances and must not be tarnished by basely expedient exploitation. It is possible that this baffling tendency to tediously evade rather than to "close" with situations that plainly demand blunt clarification and corrective action gradually alienated his wife's respect and affection, through the years. After all, you have known him only 3 years, whereas she has been affiliated with him for 30 years or thereabouts—judging by the fact that they have grandchildren.

At any rate, the best suggestion I can give you is to call his attention to the fact that the central issue is not being faced; and to ask him, quite earnestly, to say with complete honesty just what he does see ahead for you both—and to be very explicit on the point of whether he expects to get a divorce; and if so, how soon. You might explain, in effect: "Don't misunderstand me. I'm not urging a divorce. I hesitate even to breathe the word in respect to your marriage. I believe the question of divorce is so serious that . . . etc. . . . BUT, if you don't know the answer to that question or can't find it in your heart—and I am not saying you should—then we must just skip it and settle some things between ourselves. As you know, John, I love you. I believe it is the one important love of my life. But I am 40-plus and not getting any younger; although still young enough to want, and to believe I can find if I try, the kind of security that every woman wants: with a home and a man of her own, to love and be loved by. I would much prefer you to any man I might ever meet; but if I can't have you—well, that's that. I might as well say goodby to you now; and begin to try to get used to living without you."

If He Goes On Hedging, Better End the Romance

And then go on to tell him, in your own words, what I have said here—that it is HIS responsibility, absolutely and inalienably, to say the word or take the step which finally shapes your decision. But if, again, he evades the issue—then my advice is to construe his hedging as meaning that you have nothing to look forward to, in relation to him, but a time-wasting repetition of the futile, dismaying past. And in that case, of course, you ought to cut clear of him—and put to profitable social use the years just ahead. M. H.

Mr. Chippendale

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

The eighteenth century was a halcyon day for furniture designers, for it was the century when the home as we think of it today flowered into its fine full maturity. It was the century when the transition from the castle was completed. In those days—those amazing days full of awakening—one craftsman at least achieved the society of the court and became just as much of a social favorite as any lord or lady. His name was Chippendale. He designed furniture.

No one knows for sure just when Chippendale was born, or where, though his dates are usually given as 1718 to 1779. So he started in complete obscurity and worked his way up in the true Alger fashion. The time was ripe for a change of furniture—all of England seems to have been bored with the uncompromising domesticity of the furniture developed in the tradition of Good Queen Anne. They wanted something fancy and frilly and full of life—and they were lucky when Chippendale started to give them what they wanted because Mr. Chippendale was an artist—the kind of artist who could handle frills and keep them in their place, who could achieve the light touch yet stick to a fine, basic balanced design—a design that has not lost its popularity in 200 years.

Under George II, in 1740, Chippendale began to come into his own. He was made a member of the Royal Society of Arts (pretty good for an unknown cabinet maker!) and was one of the talky members of Dr. Johnson's set at the "Cheshire Cheese" on Fleet Street where coffee and philosophy blended into a heady mixture. He knew David Garrick and Boswell, and he probably talked about his furniture in much the same fashion as moderns do—with a gleam and a glow and a faint contempt for all that had gone before.

Essentially Chippendale was a great borrower—but never an imitator. He borrowed from everyone—from the French, the Italians and the Chinese, especially the latter. He was able to take a theme here, a motif there and work up a chair, a chest or a mirror that did not need his sign to label it genuine Chippendale.

Most Americans know him for his chairs—their fine balance and pleasingly bowed legs, the wide comfort of their generous seats, the balance and beauty of his chairbacks. Many moderns know how well Chinese Chippendale blends with the stern lines of modern furniture. Almost everybody knows the man by hearsay at least. But no one, not even the learned historians, know the man himself.

'Different From the Way It Seems in Motion Pictures, But Pleasant Just the Same;' That's a Visiting Portuguese Officer's Summation of America After Two Days Here

"This country? Oh, it is wonderful! Different from the way it appears in films, of course . . . but delightful just the same. The people? Very much as we expected . . . only more gracious, more friendly, more understanding . . ."

Handsome Capt. Luiz Camara Pina of the Portuguese Military Mission was speaking. Of nine officers sent to this country on invitation from the United States Government, he is the only one who can talk, with equal ease in either English or his native tongue.

"Lisbon has been a great cross-roads, ever since the war began . . . but Washington seems like a cross-roads, too. In a group like this, you see people from everywhere, much as as we do in Lisbon."

Hollywood Would Adore Them

He waved a hand toward the throng of official notables at the Portuguese Legation reception on Saturday afternoon. Certainly it was a cosmopolitan gathering. Foreign envoys, military and naval attaches, members of the State Department, United States generals and admirals, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace and Mrs. Cordell Hull, and many residential Washingtonians were among those walking down the reception line to greet Commodore Fernando Oliveria Pinto, head of the naval group; Lieut. Col. Joviano Lopes, chief of the army contingent, and Col. Francisco Craveiro Lopes, of the Air Corps trio.

Standing with them were Mme. de Bianchi, while her husband, the Portuguese Minister, was everywhere at once, seeing that all guests met every member of the mission.

"If they had picked those officers only for good looks, they couldn't have found a handsomer bunch," said Miss Pauletta Guffey, surveying the visitors. Anybody present would have vouched for that. Wreathed in smiles, and smartly turned out in uniforms resplendent with gold braid and decorations, those nine officers will have a hard time escaping film offers if they get anywhere near Hollywood on their trip to the West Coast. The mission will return to Lisbon by clipper within a few weeks, leaving behind only one member, Lieut. Jeronimo Henriques Jorge. He will stay in Washington to serve as Portuguese Naval Attache.

Mrs. Scanlon Off to New Mexico

"I like Mrs. James Doolittle. She's one of the few wives of great men who don't continually remind us of it," quipped Mrs. George Barnett at Mrs. Martin F. Scanlon's party, also on Saturday afternoon.

Both Mrs. Doolittle and Mrs. Barnett, Incidentally, had a coterie around them from the minute they arrived. Getting near either one was a job. Getting near anybody else was practically the same; for popular Gladys Scanlon has more friends than one party could possibly accommodate and have any spare room left over. Within an hour after her farewell-for-awhile fete began, therefore, every room on the lower floor of Mrs. Scanlon's McGill Terrace home was a moving mass of guests, gathered in to tell Mrs. Scanlon "goodby" and to urge her to get back to Washington soon.

She left yesterday for Roswell, N. Mex., where General Scanlon is now stationed. "And I'm not making any promises about when I'll be back," she said on Saturday. "Probably not until the war is over. The house in which she has been living is leased to Maj. and Mrs. George Watts Hill. They'll move in May 1.

Late Data on Dieckhoff

Accenting the weekend whirl were reports, and subsequent discussions, of the appointment of Hans Heinrich Dieckhoff, former German Ambassador here, as Berlin's new envoy to Madrid.

"When Dieckhoff is sent to any post, you can be sure it is because Hitler is worried about the country in question," a diplomat from a neutral country observed, in an off-the-record manner. "Obviously, he is afraid Spain may come over to the United Nations as soon as the North African campaign is over."

Long recognized as the shrewdest diplomat in the Berlin foreign office, Dieckhoff has filled numerous difficult posts with more success than his contemporaries. He was counselor of the embassy here just after World War I, when Germans were almost as unpopular as they are now. He filled a similar post in London when German diplomats were socially and politically ostracized; and he came back to America in 1937, when Hitler still had high hopes that relationships between the two countries could be improved.

If anybody could have helped the situation, Dieckhoff, with his quiet, soft-spoken demeanor would have been the man. Tactful, courteous, and cultivated, he appeared to be both puzzled and perturbed when Americans failed to swallow whole his sugar-coated propaganda pills. They were always rolled to the same prescription: Germany had no plans for conquest; it was a land of sweetness and light, of true democracy, and of abundance. If there was a Nazi Bund in this country, it carried no sanction from Berlin.

That Herr Dieckhoff dispensed those deadly doses with telling effect in certain circles nobody can deny. But at least he knew when the country would cease to take them. In view of what transpired after his departure —which, incidentally was well ahead of the final break between America and Germany— he realized early in the game that war was inevitable and that he might as well turn his peculiarly adept talents into other channels. Now, he is en route to Madrid to take over duties in another difficult spot—one which is doubly hard because of the air of mystery surrounding the death of his predecessor, Count von Malktke. The latter's relationship with Nazi leaders had cooled considerably in the past two years, and he was reported to have died of "appendicitis" just ten days after he was appointed to the post at Madrid.

Airlines Executive Dictates Rules for Pilot Textbooks

SAMUEL SOLOMON

S. J. Solomon Has Novel Job In War Effort

By Peggy Preston

Writing textbooks was the last job that genial, business-like Samuel J. Solomon fancied would be his lot in the war effort. But as director of Airlines War Training Institute, he finds himself turning them out by the dozens and doing a first-rate revolutionary job of it at that.

"Personally I never could abide a textbook," says the man who has been given the job of coordinating the training of all airlines pilots and Air Transport Command pilots for the duration. "So I operate on the theory that our books be so written that flying students, or anybody else for that matter, will actually want to read them."

The institute was begun last year when it was decided that commercial airlines schools would handle the instruction of the Air Transport Command pilots, men thoroughly grounded in the art of fighting in the air and who had only to learn the principles of cargo transport.

Supervises Training Of Transport Pilots

It became evident that the long period of traditional training once given commercial pilots was neither possible nor practical. Speed was essential, and above all, with 19 or 20 companies training the prospective fliers, it was necessary that the program be coordinated.

Thus the institute was set up, with representatives from each of the airlines as members and a quick, efficient over-all training schedule went into effect almost immediately.

The rapidity in which the program got under way is in large part due to the imaginative Mr. Solomon. He has a record for getting things done in a hurry, with a minimum of detail and a maximum of efficiency.

A native of Washington, the 45-year-old president of Northeast Airlines began his career in the field of aviation in 1933 as manager-vice president of the Washington-Hoover airport. He claims that he did not then and does not now know a thing about flying.

"I only know that today it is one of the most important things in the world," he explains as with an index finger he points out on a globe the vast regions of land and sea where planes are forging new paths and records.

Is Proud of His Textbooks

Almost all of his time at present is given over to the affairs of the institute. He is quite proud of his textbooks, although he explains that he doesn't actually write them.

"I only give the writers orders to make them readable," he says. "I remember swearing over dull, unimaginative textbooks in school and decided that if we expect these boys to learn in a hurry we have to give them books that they'll read with some interest."

Latest of the books to be written along these lines is "A Word to the Wise," which when it comes from the printers in a few days will be snatched up by a dozen organizations not connected with flight training. The reason: it gives valuable information on survival in any part of the world and it is readable from the very first line, that reads, "The aim of this book is to help you out of a jam almost anywhere."

Uses Plenty Of White Space

Bright covers, large print and good illustrations characterize the various books that deal entirely with technical phases and problems of flying. "We put in plenty of white space," says Mr. Solomon, who put in his early youth struggling with the ponderous tomes of a law course. "White space makes the boys think they haven't so much studying to do."

Here in Washington, where he has insisted on remaining despite the fact that his business headquarters are in Boston, Mr. Solomon lives with his wife and three sons. The oldest, aged 17, is already looking skyward and in a year or more expects to be up there performing the things he learned by reading his father's textbooks.

Tdygvo Agar Writes of Fight Against Naziism

Though he and his coauthor have never met and all of their work together has had to be done via the medium of trans-Atlantic cable and letter, yet the book they have just produced is attracting much attention.

Entitled "The Fight of the Norwegian Church Against Naziism," this volume, authored by Tdygvo M. Agar of the Royal Norwegian Information Service here, and Bjarne Hoye of the London Royal Norwegian Office, is an authenticated compilation of facts concerning the struggle of the Norwegians against their aggressors.

It outlines the leadership of the church and the clergy in this fight for freedom, and points out the fashion in which the clergy has held true to its beliefs, refused to recognize Nazi deans and bishops and has protested against the persecution of Jews in Norway.

Mr. Agar, an American who has spent some time in Norway, has translated several books and is at present on duty at the Norwegian information offices here, where he compiles the weekly digest of accumulated news into a four-page pamphlet.

TIMELY PERSONALITIES

Russells Getting Settled In New Home Here

Daughter of Author of Japanese Immigration Bill Returns

Very busy these days getting settled in their new home at 3610 Idaho Avenue are Comdr. James Sargent Russell, U. S. Navy, and Mrs. Russell. Also getting acquainted with the neighborhood are their two sons, Donald, aged 13; Kenneth, aged 6, and the other two members of the household, Pepper, the Kerry Blue Irish terrier, and Pff, the family cat.

Although Commander Russell has been here since last fall, Mrs. Russell and the boys have just recently joined him from their home at American Lake in the State of Washington. Fortunately they arrived just as friends of theirs, Commander and Mrs. Ford Taylor, were just vacating the Idaho Avenue house for duty elsewhere, so house-hunting was no problem.

Mrs. Russell says that she has not started a Victory garden here because she just finished plowing up an acre and a half of their place at American Lake before she left and she hasn't recovered from that effort yet.

Mrs. Russell will be remembered as the former Miss Dorothy Johnson, who was so popular among the younger set several seasons ago. She is the daughter of former Representative Albert Johnson of Washington and Mrs. Johnson. Mr. Johnson, who represented his State in Congress for 22 years, was the one who introduced the Japanese immigration bill into Congress, which stopped the rising tide of yellow men from flooding our Pacific shores. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson now make their home at Hood Canal in Washington.

Entertainment Planned for Service Folk

With an urge to provide entertainment for men and women in the war service in Washington during spring and summer weekends Mrs. Morris Cafritz is enlisting the aid of a group of her friends in cooperation with the District of Columbia Welfare and Recreation Association.

Plans are still in a nebulous state but Mrs. Cafritz held a recent meeting at her home to work out a varied program which will appeal to all service folk stationed in and near Washington.

Comdr. Gene Tunney spoke and offered as a suggestion a prize fight at Griffith Stadium to swell the sale of war bonds with free admission to men and women in the services and war workers. There will be picnics and fishing parties, special performances in the Sylvan Theater and the National Symphony Watergate concerts; tea dances at Uline's Arena and roller skating at the Riverside Stadium.

Among those attending the meeting were Senator Arthur Capper, Senator A. B. Chandler, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, Mrs. Leonard Firestone, Gen. and Mrs. John T. Lewis, Maj. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Gardener Cowles jr., Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Laszlo Detre, Mrs. Conger Pratt, Mrs. Burke Summers,

Dinners Started For "Overseas Service" Wives

Monthly dinner parties for women with husbands overseas have recently been started by Mrs. John C. MacArthur, who was hostess at the second meeting Sunday evening at 7 o'clock at the Army-Navy Club. She is assisted in making arrangements by Mrs. George A. Davis and Mrs. Keith Carlin.

Although the April meeting was held on the third Sunday because of the Easter holiday, the regular time for the monthly gathering is on the last Sunday.

Wives of men serving overseas present Sunday evening were Mrs. Alexander M. Patch, Mrs. R. A. Wheeler, Mrs. R. Bing, Mrs. D. A. Stroh, Mrs. Stump, Mrs. D. A. Davidson, Mrs. H. W. Chadduck, Mrs. A. S. Kingman, Mrs. J. L. McKee, Mrs. J. F. de Rohan, and Mrs. Sliney.

Robert W. Blisses Fete Journalists From Argentina

Robert Woods Bliss, former American Ambassador to Argentina, and Mrs. Bliss, entertained at a buffet supper last evening at the 1925 F Street Club in honor of the nine visiting journalists from Argentina, who arrived in Washington on Sunday to remain until Friday.

The group includes Jose Agusti, Fabian Calle, Alfredo Coviello, Jose Santos Callan, Nestor Joaquin Lagos, Ricardo Enrique Maquieira, Hector Peralta Ramos, Juan Valmattia and Francisco Mateos Vidal.

Some 50 or 60 additional guests had been invited to the fete, among them members of the congressional set and Government circles.

Lieut. Clarke And Bride Now In Florida

Miami Beach, Fla., April 19.—Lieut and Mrs. Alden Clarke will arrive here soon from Washington, D. C., where they were married on Sunday.

The bride is the former Miss Joan Howson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Howson of New York and Newtown, Conn. With the Rev. Charles D. Trexler officiating, the ceremony took place at the Walter Reed Memorial Chapel and was followed by a small reception at the bride's home.

Mr. Howson gave his daughter in marriage. Miss Flora Louise Lewis of New York City was her only attendant.

Mrs. Clarke is a graduate of Bryn Mawr College and of Columbia University. She is a granddaughter of Archdeacon Howson of Liverpool, England, and of the late George Powell Benjamin of New York City.

Lieutenant Clarke is a graduate of Western Reserve Academy and of Harvard University, where he held a fellowship in fine arts after graduation. He is a grandson of the late Mrs. Henry Mills Alden of Larchmont, N. Y., and is now with the adjutant general's department attached to the Army Air Force at Miami Beach.

Let the Hurricane Blow

BY MICHAEL TRENT

CHAPTER XII

Steve suddenly grinned. "Good girl," he said. "But we better go back. I can't trust myself too long in the moonlight with a pretty girl."

They were nearly back to the base when Ruth turned her ankle. The pain was sharp, and she cried out and nearly fell. Steve caught and held her, and for a moment she leaned against him. That moment was enough; Steve's arms, already about her, tightened and he bent his head and kissed her on the mouth. She was so unprepared for that that at first she was pliant in his arms. And when she finally struggled, Steve held her so she could not break the circle of his arms.

"Steve, please —" she pleaded.

He let her go abruptly. She lifted her hand and drew it across her lips as though wiping away a stain. She felt like crying.

"So it's really true," he said. "You have gotten over me, and you are in love with Cartier." His voice sounded harsh and his eyes weren't pleasant. He was angry. "I thought you were just building up a protection against me. I'm sorry. If I hadn't doubted, I wouldn't have done that."

"From here on, yes."

The arrival of Tonia Wayne was an important event. Steve Lowry meant to take Tonia in his stride this time, never faltering, but he had an uneasy hunch that her visit was bound to have repercussions.

He was watching the ground crew working on his damaged bomber when the transport plane came in. The mechanics stopped work to watch the Hollywood star's arrival. Quite a crowd of men gathered about the big plane, and the commanding officer and his staff were on hand. A jeep rolled up to take the guest across the field to the clubhouse, where a room had been carefully prepared. Steve stood by his plane and carelessly lighted a cigarette. He marveled at his own calm.

The plane door opened. A gangway was rigged in place. A crew member came first, then Tonia. Steve was too far across the field to see her expression, but he knew she was smiling in such a way that more than one man would feel a tug at his heart. Her green-gray eyes would be aglow, as they always were when homage was paid her. But he could see her tall, slim figure and the blondeness of her hair. He could see her stand there while the crowd excitedly cheered, while she made a little speech, and then he saw her descend to the crowd. Men surrounded her. Tonia, he thought, was loving that.

This was but her informal welcome. Almost at once Tonia was led to the jeep. She was handed in by the commanding officer, who climbed in beside her, and the jeep's driver toured the field and finally arrived at the neat cluster of base buildings. A moment later Tonia was escorted into headquarters.

Later in the day there was the official welcome. The base personnel was called on the parade for inspection. The men turned out freshly polished. Steve stood in the straight line of pilots, navigators and other air force officers. The pilot on Steve's right said, low voiced, "I'd rather be inspected by this glamour girl any day than by a brass hat."

Tonia, escorted by the commanding officer and his staff, was inspecting the enlisted ranks first. From the corner of his eye Steve could see her coming nearer and nearer. His pulse was fast. He was ridiculously excited; it was nearly as bad as when he attacked that U-boat. Once or twice the commanding officer pointed out a man who had merited distinction for the way he had performed his duties. Tonia would halt and talk to that man. Steve knew she was winning lifetime friends here. There was a touch of royalty about Tonia. Perhaps, he thought, nothing else mattered.

Finally the inspection party reached the line of air force officers. The commanding officer was presenting her to each officer. Steve stood rigid, looking straight ahead. Now they stood before him.

"Miss Wayne—Captain Lowry."

Tonia's greeting died on her lips. She stared and there was shock in her eyes. Her smile faded, but quickly returned, and perhaps only Steve had seen her marvelous poise shaken.

"Capt. Lowry and I are old friends," she said. "This is a pleasant surprise, Captain."

"Thank you, Miss Wayne." He tried to keep his voice casual. "But the pleasure is all mine. May I express my personal appreciation for your coming here?"

"Why, thank you."

"The men seemed to look forward to your visit."

"I'm so glad. I'm awfully happy to be here."

She smiled at him in a lingering way, and her eyes met his squarely as if to communicate a personal message. Then she moved on to the next officer. Steve tried to get a grip on himself, but he was oddly shaken. The pilot beside him whispered, "So you know her? How come you kept it quiet? Is it a military secret or something?"

"Oh, it was just one of those things," Steve said.

What he was thinking was something else. He was wondering how long Tonia would stay on the island. He was wondering if he would get a moment alone with her. Ruth Hammond had been right. Tonia's arrival had meaning for him.

A stage had been hastily erected out of doors, since the clubhouse was too small to contain the whole of the base personnel, and lights were rigged to spotlight the entertainers. An orchestra had been recruited, and now that it was evening the men filled the space before the platform. The orchestra played valiantly.

Steve told himself he was bored. But he wasn't good at lying, even to himself. He was as excited, under his show of calm, as any man present. He had to pull on his will power to keep his select place apart from the crowd. He was leaning against the bole of a palm, off to one side, and he kept lighting his pipe. He told himself, "If my plane was in shape I'd have asked for patrol tonight." Even that was a lie.

"Were you waiting for me, Steve?"

It's Getting a Bit Difficult To Tell One From T'other!

Thirty-seven 'Legit' Plays to Be Filmed; Servicemen to Present an Unnamed Show; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THOSE OMNIVEROUS AMUSEMENT-SEEKERS who equally enjoy their theatrical entertainment across the footlights or on the screen will find themselves doubling on their tracks rather more than usual these coming months. Hollywood's major producing companies have quietly sopped up 37 Broadway stage successes to be converted into celluloid drama.

MARTHA RAYE

Heading the list in the number of properties acquired is Twentieth Century-Fox. From that studio will be coming gelatin translations of "By Jupiter," the Ray Bolger hit, in which Laurel & Hardy and Martha Raye will be starred; "Claudia," with the original Dorothy McGuire still in the title role; Maxwell Anderson's "Eve of St. Mark," "Flare Path," now running in London; "Heaven Can Wait," which was "Birthday" on the stage; "A Highland Fling," another London hit; Steinbeck's "The Moon Is Down," due next at Loew's Capitol; "Private Confusion," by Austin Parker and Hardie Albright; the Theater Guild's "The Russian People;" "In Time to Come," Richard Walton Tully's memorable "Bird of Paradise," previously produced as a silent picture; "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," the Clare Boothe hit, and "Something for the Boys." "Two Faced Mulligan" will be done first as a stage play and then as a film, also under the Twentieth Century-Fox aegis.

Paramount will be coming to bat with at least two Broadway hits—"Let's Face It" and Gertrude Lawrence's "Lady in the Dark."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer already has completed "DuBarry Was a Lady" and "Best Foot Forward" and has "Girl Crazy," with Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland, in production; has already released "Cabin in the Sky," with Ethel Waters and Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, and has acquired the Lunts' "The Pirate," by S. N. Behrman, and "Labor for the Wind," by Irwin Shaw. Scheduled for shooting are Georgie Jessel's "High Kickers," "Without Love," in which Katharine Hepburn will repeat her stage role; the all-feminine "Cry Havoc" and "The Wookey," the Frederick Hazlitt Brennan opus, in which Edmund Gwenn opened here some seasons back.

United Artists will present "Dishonored Lady," with Hunt Stromberg producing the former Katharine Cornell vehicle.

RKO-Radio will account for "Higher and Higher" and "Portrait of a Lady," with "Ladies Day" ready and awaiting release.

Warner Brothers are coming up with Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army," now in work; Lillian Hellman's "Watch on the Rhine," with Bette Davis and Paul Lukas, in his original part; Brock Pemberton's "Janie" and the current "Dark Eyes," with "Arsenic and Old Lace" already piled on that backlog.

Not to be left out, Columbia will present "Leave It to Me," Gregory Ratoff's filmization of the business by Bella and Sam Spewack, and Sam Wood's camera rendition of "The Land Is Bright," the Edna Ferber-George Kaufman play seen here before it went into New York.

It won't be long now until you will be wondering precisely what theater it may be you're in.

Tomorrow night at 8:30, in Central High School Auditorium, Thirteenth and Clifton Streets Northwest, the Special Service Unit from Fort George G. Meade, over the line in Maryland, will present what is described as "a bang-up show," which their bulletin carelessly neglects to give a title. Anyhow, Pvt. Bob Kimelman will be master of ceremonies and approximately 60 servicemen will take part in the program. It is sponsored by the District of Columbia Recreation Department and Recreation Services, Inc.

The Social Whirl

Because it has finally been permitted to "leak out" that Mr. Daniel S. Terrell, erstwhile director of advertising and publicity for the loewcal Loew interests, has been loaned to the OWI for important duties at an overseas post, there can be no possible harm in divulging that Master Terrell was elaborately feted in the high, Loew rehearsal hall, projection room and cocktail lounge last Saturday afternoon. Dan'l was loaded down with enough encomiums to break his back, if not his spirit, and a considerable number of bundles of more material tokens of the affectionate esteem in which he is held by everyone who ever has had social or professional contact with him. Nobody, including himself, knows exactly when he will be taking off, but whenever it is, he will be all bogged down with the best wishes of all and sundry.

This afternoon, beginning with prandial pastiming at No. 1 Thomas Circle, Mr. Lust, the suburban theater tycoon, whose real first name is Santa Claus, not Sid, will be entertaining his usual spring mob of distinguished guests at the opening ball game out at Mr. Griffith's amphitheater. On his recent return from a Florida outing, Santa brought the masculine incumbents of the drayma desks tie and handkerchief sets to make sure they would be properly duded up for the occasion.

From Grace Hospital, Detroit, Warren and Patricia Slee issue their W. P. B. Bulletin No. 1, announcing the birth of their first child, a daughter also christened Patricia, on April 2. Formerly attached to the United Artists office in this city, Warren now is with M-G-M in the Middle West. An asterisked footnote explains that that cryptic "W. P. B." business means "Warren and Pat's Baby."

There-Ain't-No-Justice Note

How can Paul McNutt toss out that first ball with his own order freezing him to his desk!

Arthur's Legs Now on Priority

Her performance in Columbia's George Stevens' production, "The More The Merrier," opposite Joel McCrea, includes one sequence on an apartment house rooftop in the summertime, with generous views of the shapely Arthur figure clad in a scant play suit.

The medium long-shots of Jean are so fetching that Producer-Director Stevens feels there should be a close-up, too. In order to obtain this, Jean would need to return to Columbia for a half-hour's shooting. But she is already at work at another studio, and can't spare the time.

Unless the two studios, and Jean, can get together on a time when her presence is not otherwise required, there will be no close-up of the Arthur gams for the duration—of her present engagement.

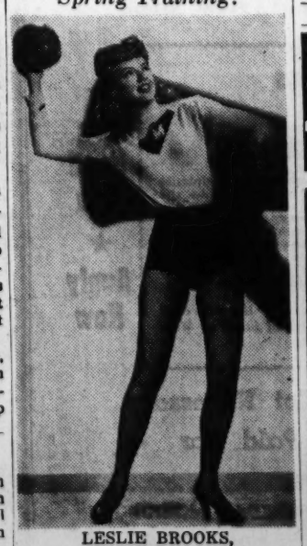
He's Gotta Drawl

Dwight Butcher, Fort Worth actor, has been engaged to coach Gary Cooper with the Texas drawl the star will adopt for his role in "Saratoga Trunk."

Kennedy Renewed

Bill Kenedy, former KHJ announcer, has been given a renewal of his Warner Bros. acting contract. Kenedy's most recent role was in "Air Force."

Spring Training!



LESLIE BROOKS, curvaceous Columbia starlet, seems to feel that heaving a spring pigskin around a bit will condition her for important roles in "Tho Senoritas From Chicago" and "What's Buzzin' Cousin," next on her schedule

Four Reasons Why It Is So Human

TIMES TURN BACKWARD to the bewilderment of youth in this scene from William Saroyan's "The Human Comedy," now in its second flourishing week on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Left to right—Master Jack Jenkins, Darryl Hickman, Mickey Rooney and Fay Bainter add gentle appeal and power to a moving drama of character and the commonplace that no one will soon forget

HEDDA HOPPER

Brides Will Be Brides!

Hollywood, Calif., April 19.—Ginger Rogers has taken a house at La Jolla for six months and plans to spend the rest of the summer there. Already has asked for a postponement of "The Gibson Girl." She's going to have a honeymoon or else. On the other hand, Dorothy Lamour has returned to town to begin her new picture . . . Greer Garson has a clause in her contract giving her the right to do a play a year. She's now reading plays—Metro-Goldwyn's unhappy about it. They needn't worry. Greer will stay on the lot . . . Hedy Lamarr finally kissed and made up with Metro and will star in "Heavenly Body." To celebrate, she, John Loder and Ann Sothern did a tour of the Main Street joints and had a whale of a time.

GINGER ROGERS

Knows What He Wants

Edward Robinson trying to interest a studio in Idwal Jones' prize-winning novel, "Vineyard," so he can play the role of a Senator . . . Joan Allison, who authored "Casablanca," is working on "Date Line—Istanbul" for Paramount, and they'll try to borrow Humphrey Bogart for it . . . Some of Elsa Maxwell's quiz questions were too sophisticated for the Hays office, so they've been deleted from the "Stage Door Canteen" picture . . . Florabelle Muir's got her work cut out. She bought the Los Angeles City News Service from Marvin Willard and will run that in connection with her special reporting.

Amazing Fellows

Before Col. David MacDonald, who made that amazing picture "Desert Victory" and George Archibald pushed off to San Francisco, they came around to see me. MacDonald, formerly with De Mille, showed him the picture, after which C. B. jumped up and said, "I have something special for you." And handed him his own "Croix de Guerre"—a silver dollar of a certain vintage, which he hands out only to select favorites, such as Paulette Goddard, Claudette Colbert, and many other ladies. I believe this is the first time a gentleman ever got one . . . In talking of "Malta," which is to be made here, MacDonald said, "If they paid me $1000 a week I wouldn't act as technical director. 'Malta' can only be made in Malta. You have no idea what the people are like. I was there six weeks ago and handed a chocolate bar to a child. She didn't know what to do with it. But even in England 3-year-olds start eating bananas, skin and all. They've never seen them before." . . . When he photographed the London fire during the worst blitz he thought the dome of St. Peter's was the best place to shoot it from. Asked the old sexton, who had to get permission from his superior, and as he and his cameraman started up the stairs, the sexton said, "That will be sixpence each, please—usual charge for tourists."

Haunting Memories

McDonald said, "No sound in music is as haunting as the bagpipes played on the desert. During the last October drive, when some British were captured, a Scot's cameraman also was taken. He had two cameras, one belonging to the British government, a Leica of his own. One German officer had a sense of humor, let him keep his own, but took his moving picture camera. And I'll be darned if Scottie didn't make him sign a release for it so if they got away (and they did) he could show it to his superior officer." McDonald spent 16 months in North Africa making "Desert Victory," then flew to London, cut it hurriedly. Night it was finished, flew it to America and right on to Washington. As he was having dinner at the White House, he turned to the President and said, "This is the first meal I've had in 16 months." It's too bad he can't himself take the picture to every defense plant in this country, show it to the workers during the noon hour or night shift, and let them see just what their work means to the war effort and the winning of it. But whatever happens, don't fail to see "Desert Victory."

Signs of Spring

Bing Crosby's off to Mexico City instead of the Mayo Clinic, as reported. Bing's got to see one of his horses win a race just once. One did last Saturday down there and he's hoping for a repeat. . . . John Hubbard, under another name, used to do curtain raisers in the bull ring at Tia Juana. Now he's been invited to fight a main event at Guadalajara. But his time is taken raising 200 baby turkeys, not felling bulls. He's raising 'em in the heart of Brentwood, a stone's throw from Fred MacMurray's lovely estate. . . . Bob Hawk, the "hanks to the Yanks" quizzer, will do a series of quiz shorts for Paramount. . . . Rudy Vallee's been singing "As Time Goes By," the current hit from "Casablanca," 14 years. Next to "Your Time Is My Time," it's his favorite song.

Was He Surprised!

Bill Goetz tried to line up all the "Claudia" girls for the picture, discovered there were seven, but only two are still working—Dorothy McGuire and Kay Aldridge. Other five have all married rich men. . . . Cass Daley, now that she's well enough, will finish "Riding High," then get a 10 days' rest, and into "Rainbow Island" with Gil Lamb.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Gazette

New York, April 19.

LITERARY DEPT.: Alan Moorehead, author of the forthcoming book, "Don't Blame the General," is in Tunisia now, as a correspondent for the London Express . . . His wife, Lucy, who was General Auchinleck's secretary, works in the New York office of the London Express. Her job is to buy, for the Express, suitable stories published in the American magazines. She recently read a Saturday Evening Post story about the psychological reactions of soldiers under fire, and cabled to her London office suggesting its purchase. The Express' London office cabled the reply: "Send Saturday Evening Post story re soldiers' psychological reaction." By mistake, that cable went to Alan Moorehead in Tunisia, instead of to Lucy Moorehead in New York . . . Alan immediately wrote a story about soldiers' reactions to warfare, sent it to the Saturday Evening Post—and sold it for $1000.

PERSONALS: Larry Adler, the harmonica player, now is in Newfoundland on a one-man tour of the Army camps. Last week was his fifth wedding anniversary, and he was permitted to telephone his wife in New York. The phone operator first warned her about the restrictions—she must not discuss the weather, places, names, etc. Then she heard her husband's voice . . . "The Canadians," he began . . . The censor disconnected them, and issued a warning . . . "Did you see Mr.", Mrs. Adler started—and again the censor disconnected them, with a warning . . . "There's only one way of keeping out of trouble in this phone call," sighed Mrs. Adler, and permitted the rest of the conversation to be continued, in her stead, by their daughter, Carol—aged 3.

BUSINESS DEPT.: The Ranee of Pudakota, who is in N. Y. now, was at the Stork Club reminiscing about the first time she learned about New York. It was in a night club in Parsi, where songs of Manhattan were being sung by the Paris favorite, Bricktop, who now entertains in Harlem . . . "You can't sing, and you can't dance," the Ranee told Bricktop. "Then how is it that you're a successful night-club entertainer?" . . . "To be a success in night clubs, you don't have to be able to sing or dance," Bricktop explained, "You must have personality—and a heap of friends."

LOCAL NEWS: Barney Ross, who will spend the next five weeks touring the war plants, will return here and submit to an operation on his legs . . . The Army still is questioning the advisibility of releasing the full story of the Doolittle raid over Tokyo, despite Elmer Davis' announcement that it will be released. Davis is determined to release it; if it isn't, he may resign . . . The effigy of Hitler found in a Manhattan taxicab was a press stunt for the United Artists' anti-Nazi picture now at the Capitol, "Hangmen Also Die" . . . The Critics' Circle award to "The Patriots" added $50,000 to the previous offers for the film rights.

MUSIC DEPT.: Moritz Rosenthal, the famous pianist who studied under Liszt, still finds time to listen to the prodigies brought to his home and offer advice as to their education. A boy, 11 years old, was brought by his parents to Rosenthal's home, and played for the venerable pianist . . . Rosenthal listened patiently. "Well, what do you think?" the boy's parents asked . . . "He must be a genius," said Rosenthal. "Talent he hasn't got. So he must be a genius."

DRAMA DEPT.: Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse received a cablegram from Sweden. It was signed by a man named Schmidt. The cable read: "Arsenic successful last night in Gothenburg. Sweden just ripe for it" . . . The Office of Cable Censorship immediately proned Lindsay and Crouse and requested further information about this message from Mr. Schmidt, who apparently was feeding arsenic to the people of a neutral nation. Lindsay and Crouse, who produced the show, explained that arsenic referred to their hit, "Arsenic and Old Lace." Schmidt produced it in Sweden.

Transit Firms Here Held War Industries

"the essentiality to the defense effort of the services rendered by the Capital Transit Co can scarcely be disputed. Without transportation of Government war workers to and from their jobs, the entire defense program would be seriously hampered. This has become especially true since the rationing of tires and gasoline."

From an opinion by the office of the General Counsel of the War Manpower Commission.

TO CATCH A BEAU!

What utterly feminine fashion makes men moon-eyed? . . . Now, don't all shout at once! We know . . . and you know . . . it's bows . . Smart little girls discovered bows long, long ago and wore them in their hair to melt their daddies' hearts. Big girls know a good thing when they see one, too . . . that's why the current fashion-rage is bows. So . . . naturally . . . The Hecht Co. (famous for new fashions first) . . . features bows now! Bows in all their beguiling variations . . . bows frankly flirtatious, perched rakishly on hats and shoes . . . bows prettily "come-hither" in bow-tied frocks . . . bows merry as a wink . . . and we mean our winsome bow ties! Bows sentimental as a love-letter . . . and that means our bow-bedecked accessories. And—because in addition to being utterly feminine—bows make such charming decor . . . we have even introduced the bow motif in your home-life . . . presenting it in shower curtains, leisure pajamas and dinner ware! The Hecht Co.
